Russia Moves Along
A Real Airship
For Better Homes
If China Could Buy

By Arthur Brisbane

THOSE WHO have solemnly discussed Russian plans and prospects in Wall Street, some distance from Moscow, and decided that Russia couldn't possibly succeed in anything because she has theories opposed to Wall Street, will change their minds gently.

It is announced that Russia now stands first in supplying wheat to the English market, then Canada takes second place, and the United States, once third, is now fifth. Evidently the Russians can produce wheat, dump it, and get cash for it.

Possibly our government's experiment in trying to lift prosperity by buying wheat above the world rate accounts for the low American shipments.

The United States, now in the business of dumping wheat on its own account to get rid of accumulations, will have opportunities to judge of Russian business sense in competition.

Gen. William Mitchell, head of our flying forces in the war, tells you that the United States shows signs of striking out on its own account in aviation. He writes, after a visit to Akron:

"I have looked over the airship being built for the Navy Department at Akron. This ship is the greatest attempt of man to conquer the air. It will be able to cross the Atlantic four times without refueling at reduced speed. It will be able to circle the globe, at the latitude of New York.

"In its front part there is a hangar which will accommodate from four to seven airplanes which can take off or land on the ship at will, and all of its 'works' are inside it.

"Compare a ship of this size, costing five and a half million dollars, with a surface airplane carrier that costs from fifty to eighty millions. The airship alone, or with its airplanes, can destroy a whole fleet of sea vessels, and a group of them can defend themselves very well against air attack, with the assistance of their own airplanes, their power of concealment and their maneuver ability."

The dirigible described by General Mitchell, more than twice as big as the Graf Zeppelin, one-third again as large as the biggest British dirigible, is 785 feet long, with a gas capacity of 6,500,000 cubic feet and a diameter of 133 feet. General Mitchell adds:

"An airship service around the world is now practicable. Passengers and freight can be delivered to the ship and discharged by airplane, making it unnecessary for the ship to land, except for repairs."

This country is told, in all languages and accents of anguish:

"You must help Europe to get on her feet. You must cancel Europe's debt to you, and thus increase the purchasing power of those who would be your best customers. If you don't help them financially, how can they buy from you?"

Why not help the financial conditions and buying power of Asia, by trying to strengthen the value of silver, the only money used by half the earth's people?

James M. Speers, head of McCutcheon & Co., in New York, writes:

"Mr. Coolidge recently called attention to the fact that if China's buying power were only equal to that of Japan, she would buy eight billion worth of imports a year. There are people still living who remember when Japan's buying power was zero. Anybody looking ahead, therefore, knows that China must necessarily be a much larger factor than Japan in world trade."

We have the goods piled up and capacity for unlimited production. If Asia had sound money, we could sell our surplus.

Silver has been good money for 5000 years, much of the time used more widely than gold.

It could be made as good again, if the unconscious conspiracy against silver could be ended.

This is "Better Home Week," and in the Chicago Herald-Examiner, Seattle Post-Intelligencer, and other important newspapers for which he writes daily, Calvin Coolidge emphasizes the importance of the home and its influence on human beings. He says, truly:

"Only the people who live in it can make it a better home."

But others can help, for instance, those who make good furniture, carpets, radio sets, talking machines, pianos, vacuum cleaners, electric washers and heaters, good plumbing fixtures, comfortable beds.

Mother's day will soon be here. You can celebrate it by buying her a comfortable arm chair, a better radio set, a good automobile, with a comfortable

Guy L. Vaughan, receiver for five Greater Boston banks, dodged and shooed off depositors who hounded him for months prior to his disappearance, according to disclosures today in the investigations being conducted by the State and three separate counties.

The pleas of weeping women and anxious men, whose life savings are involved, presented a tragic picture in striking contrast to the gay life of the young bachelor who spent $25,000 annually, made trips to Europe and Florida, often with his law student lodgers, and maintained a Filipino valet and chef, a high-priced automobile and a speed boat.

It was the plight of hundreds of wage earners, many of them ill and aged, that caused the Nonantum Depositors' Committee to take steps which have led to the investigations now under way. It was in Newton that the first shots were fired.

150 FLEE FIRE IN BACK BAY

Back Bay noonday traffic in Boylston st. was blocked today while crowds watched firemen battle a blaze in the Eldridge Building and quiet a panic among 150 women who fled the fashionable shops in the building by elevators and stairways.

Ludwig Frank, 60, proprietor of the Designers' Art School on the sixth floor, jumped to safety on the fifth story roof of the Plotkin Bros. Building next door.

After he had been his 85 girl pupils safely to the street Frank returned to his office for valuables and was partially overcome by smoke.

He climbed to the window sill for air and stood swaying while the crowd below watched.

Two men on the roof below called to him to jump, and he sprang into their arms escaping without injury.

Miss Ailene Hartford, an elevator operator, was a heroine of the fire. Undaunted by the volumes of smoke which poured through the elevator shaft, she kept her car running, carrying excited women to the street.

The blaze originated in the third-floor dress shop of Mary E. Morse from an explosion of cleaning fluid. Miss Morse, who was cleaning a hat, was slightly burned about the hands.

The interior of the dress shop and the hall leading to it were destroyed, but streams of water from aerial ladders outside prevented the flames from spreading to other floors.

A partial examination disclosed that Miss Wheeler sustained compound fractures of both hips and concussion of the brain.

Jones' back was broken, one eye gouged out and his face and head severely lacerated.

According to witnesses, the roadster was travelling at high speed when the steering gear apparently failed. The car hurtled into a tree, and the occupants were thrown more than 25 feet over the windshield.

Lion in Girl Attack Is Not Mad

Cincinnati, May 1 (AP)—The lion that clawed and attacked Vivian Leischner, 6, at a public school yesterday, was as docile as a pet kitten today when examined for rabies at City Hall by members of the board of health.

Dr. Carl Mitchell of the health department said the animal was in excellent physical condition and no traces of rabies had been found. It will be held for 11 days for another examination.

Physicians said results of the examination strengthened belief the girl will recover from the scalp and back wounds inflicted when the lion mashed the child with its paws.

More than 2000 persons gathered about the platform on the Charles st. mall where the meeting took place, all except 200 being spectators.

Besides the special guard on the Common, which prevented all semblance of a riot, watch was being kept on all public buildings and churches, and a patrol was on duty outside state prison.

PLAYBOY SAYS 'NOT GUILTY' TO MURDER CHARGE

Smiles During Court Hearing; Trial on June 8; Woman Collapses in Jury Room

By JAMES J. SMITH

Newport, R. I., May 1—Elliott R. Hathaway, Fall River playboy, alleged slayer of Verna E. Russell, pretty Fall River nurse, was indicted today on a charge of first degree murder.

June 8 was named by the court as trial date, following a formal plea of not guilty in court.

Flushed, but smiling, Hathaway stood, in Newport County Superior Court and heard a grand jury of 19 men and three women, called in special session, report the indictment.

A crowd of about 2000 persons, mostly women, who had remained outside the courthouse during the jury's deliberations of the evidence over a four-hour period, hissed and booed Hathaway as he was led from court, under heavy police guard, on his way back to jail in Cranston.

WITNESS COLLAPSES

The special jury session began its deliberations at 10 a. m. after Hathaway had been taken to the courthouse from the Providence county jail.

Hathaway remained in a detention cell in the basement of the building until 1:35 when he was taken into the courtroom where among others, his twin brother, Allyn, and his father, Rep. Louis E. Hathaway, Massachusetts legislator, were waiting.

There had been one short delay in the jury deliberations due to the collapse of a woman witness. She collapsed while testifying and a physician was summoned. She continued her testimony after being revived.

Forty minutes after Hathaway's arrival in the courtroom, where he occupied a seat under guard in an empty jury box, the grand jury filed in and through its Foreman, Robert J. Biesel of Newport, reported the indictment.

SMILES CONTINUALLY.

Hathaway was called to the bench before Judge Leonidas Poulos but by Atty.-Gen. Benjamin M. McLaughlin.

His face was flushed but he smiled almost continually. Through his attorney, Samuel P. Jacobs of Boston, he waived a reading of the indictment.

"Your Honor, I am reserving the privilege of filing special pleas within the next 10 days," Jacobs informed the court.

"Does your client plead not guilty?" Judge Poulos asked.

"Yes," said Jacobs.

POLICE REFUSE TO DISCLOSE HER IDENTITY

Dance Murder Still a Mystery, Though Coroner Says It Has Been Solved

Hamden, CT., May 1—A Hamden girl with whom William Wetmore practiced gunfire last year was gridded today by police to learn if she had loaned her revolver to Wetmore on Saturday before Emily Kirk, 21-year-old farm girl, was shot to death.

She denied having loaned the gun to Wetmore on that day, but Capt. Harry Barrows of the Hamden police guarded her name and said she would be questioned again.

The new turn in the case that remains a mystery, in spite of a preliminary finding of Coroner James Corrigan that Wetmore's suicide solved the crime, came while two youths who disappeared from Hampden after the murder were sought for questioning.

Dr. George H. Joslin, for 60 years medical examiner, remained at odds with the coroner over the verdict, maintaining that at least one of the two youths sought knows something of the killing.

Like many others in the town, Dr. Joslin believes Wetmore was either innocent or not alone in the crime and ordered chemical analysis of bloodstains on the clothing of Wetmore and the girl.

With Capt. Barrows of the Hamden police he continued to question neighbors and relatives of the 21-year-old farm girl regarding her acquaintanced, especially the two who disappeared.

Prominent supporters of Dr. Joslin's theory are members of the Mix district fire company, whose dance Miss Kirk attended Saturday night and outside of whose hall she was found murdered Sunday morning.

As an indication that they believe in the innocence of Wetmore, the company plans to attend his funeral tomorrow in a body. The services will otherwise be private.

Coroner Corrigan reiterated today he was satisfied that Wetmore was the slayer of the girl, basing his contention on the powder marks found on his hands and the story that the insanely jealous admirer had at least once been refused engagement.

He said he had a definite clue as to the whereabouts of the murder gun, but refused to divulge his secret until he can check it thoroughly. The death weapon has not been found.

Mrs. Maude Wetmore, mother of the suicide, was still in a state of collapse today and was being cared for by neighbors, including an aunt of the murdered girl.

She was wanted to die as a result of the persecution and suicide of her son.

CURLEY SCORES WAGE CUTTERS AS DISLOYAL

Business men who discharge help or lower wages during the depression are as much enemies of the country as Communists, Mayor Curley declared today at the Veterans of Foreign Wars patriotic on the Common.

He characterized Communists as "leaderless," while Congressman Hamilton Fish of New York, who also spoke, charged they are raising money in this country to supply arms and ammunition to Sandino, Nicaraguan bandit. Fish also urged that alien Communists be deported.

The mayor said a speaker at the Communist demonstration today at Charles st. mall had received city aid for a year and a half and then turned down a job obtained for him by city officials because work didn't appeal to him.

RED FLAG NO SOLUTION

"Unemployment is a challenge that the men of America have met from the beginning," he said. "We can solve the problem of industrial depression, but not by waving aer d flag and appealing to glorious conditions in Russia, where a worse condition of serfdom exists than in any other country in the world.

"It is the duty of society to provide the opportunity for workers to sell their labor, and until such an opportunity exists it is the duty of society to provide for the worker.

"The inventive genius of Americans has taken away 3,000,000 jobs but we can't get a five day week or a six hour day by letting loose hot air and waving the red flag."

FISH TELLS OF PERIL

Referring to conditions during the past year he said: "I seem to come into office every time a depression is due."

Touching on patriotism the mayor stated: "The World War didn't determine much. They would be at it again in Europe today if they had the money and the courage."

Congressman Fish told of alleged activities of Communists in raising money for Sandino.

"The Anti-Imperialist League, with headquarters in New York, city and branches in most of our big industrial centers, organized in Moscow and officered by Communists, is raising these funds," said Cong. Fish.

"When peaceful American citizens were brutally murdered by the Communist bandits under Sandino, then the government should have used the marines to protect American lives and property or should have sent Gen. Smedley Butler with sufficient marines to mop up in Nicaragua.

"There is an irrepressible conflict between Americanism and Communism. No Communist can be a loyal American citizen. Communism seeks to destroy American democracy and substitute a revolutionary dictatorship based on fear and violence.

"Adequate laws should be passed dealing with unemployment and old-age pensions and a vigorous effort made by Congress to help the honest and willing American wage-earner to earn a living, and the employers should be urged to maintain the present American wage scale.

"The American Federation of Labor is the most consistent and bitterest opponent of Communism as it sees through the false propaganda.

ANSWER TO ATTACKS.

"The answer to the insidious attacks against our government and even our form of government by Communists, Socialists, pink intellectuals, college professors and even a smattering of ministers of the gospel, is that for the past 50 years our wage-earners have been the best paid, clothed and fed and most contented in the world.

"If alien Communists will not cease their revolutionary campaign, then it is the duty of Congress to enact laws to deport them."

The veterans' celebration, arranged to offset the radical demonstration, took places at the Parkman bandstand with a three-hour program starting at noon.

More than 300 school children of many nationalities participated in a pageant depicting the progress of the United States. Seventy-three auxiliaries of the V. F. W. superintended the program.

OTHER SPEAKERS

Other speakers were Attorney-General Warner, Sergeant Alston Hamilton, representing the Secretary of War; Mrs. G. H. Brennan, past president-general of the D. A. R.; Walsh Turner, department commander, G. A. R.; Dr. Julian D. Lucas, department commander, V. F. W.; Mrs. Irene E. Hurley, president of the auxiliary of the Massachusetts department; Mrs. Ida Cohen, general chairman, and City Councillor Herman L. Lush, master of ceremonies, and Congressman William A. Connery of Lynn. Invocation was by Rev. Wallace Hayes, national chaplain.

Prior to the veterans' program the city of Boston officially observed the anniversary of its incorporation.

"We will not allow any pact to leave America defenseless," said Mrs. Hurley. "We will not allow America to be disarmed while other countries continue to arm. Although we do not look for war, we must be realistic."

Gen. Hamilton advised his audience "to think and act in terms of America in the midst of unrest throughout the world today." Dr. Lucas called for a fight against encroachment of national rights by outsiders.

This is William

This picture was printed in yesterday's American as William Wetmore, sweetheart of Emily Kirk of Hamden, Ct. A few hours later a friend of the Wetmore family in New Haven telephoned the American that it was Clement Wetmore, and the American at once printed the correction. Later the friend called again to say that he was mistaken and that the picture is that of William, who killed himself, and that the American was entitled to know it. The evening American is pleased to reproduce the picture, in the same spirit of fairness that was shown in the first instance.

LAWYER ASKS FOR LIFE TERM FOR OLIVER

Lewis Makes a Dramatic Plea for Insanity or Second Degree at Bagni Trial

Evangelista L. Bagni, Somerville gas station manager, shot to death in a holdup, was a victim of the "age" and "prohibition liquor," counsel for John J. Oliver, one of three defendants, charged with the murder, told a Middlesex jury today.

With Walter Sousa and John J. Wall, Oliver is charged with first degree murder as a result of Bagni's death Feb. 24 at Mystic ave. and Shore Drive, Somerville.

Opening the defense for Oliver, Atty. William H. Lewis made a dramatic plea for a verdict of insanity or second degree murder.

"The killing of Bagni is the result of the age and time we are living in," Lewis said.

BLAMES MOVIES

"It was induced by the hero-worship of gunmen, movies and magazines, headlines and prohibition liquor that induces courage into youths of this age.

"I will not ask for acquittal for my client but for one of two verdicts, either one of which will place him in custody for the rest of his life.

"I ask you, gentlemen, to find him not guilty on the grounds of insanity or find him guilty of murder in the second degree.

"The crime was nothing more than an attempt to commit robbery while armed and that is punishable only to the extent of 20 years in prison.

YOUTHS' PRANK.

"No actual robbery was made, and under the law the killing was not committed during the commission of an act punishable by life imprisonment, as the government alleges.

"It was a mad prank of three immature youths led by one who was criminally irresponsible.

"They are as much the victims of the age as poor Bagni.

"At the time of the shooting Oliver, in the eyes of the law, was mentally irresponsible and was not of sufficient mind or reason to understand the act he was doing.

"He was urged on by an uncontrollable impulse."

FAMILY HISTORY

"I will introduce family history on both sides to show alcoholism in the family, that when a child he fell on the back head with a brick, quarrelled and fussed with his playmates about trivial things, and at the age of 15 became a heavy drinker."

During the opening the three defendants sat unmoved, but spectators in the court grasped as the plea unwound.

After the opening Sousa and Wall told of drinking and the theft of an automobile on the night of the murder, but insisted that no robbery had been committed.

Both placed Oliver inside Bagni's gas station when the latter and his dog were shot, and both quoted Oliver with the statement, "I think I shot the man."

"He was crazy; he was drunk and talking wild," Wall testified.

Sousa said he had no intention of taking part in a robbery, but was afraid of Oliver and for that reason went along.

Lewis' opening was the last of the defendants, the others being delivered yesterday by Leodice Foy and James S. Cannon, counsel for Wall and Sousa, respectively.

Landis' Golf Ball Trick Rebounds on Himself

New Orleans, May 1—Commissioner K. M. Landis is through with that blankety blank game of golf, at least until the next round. He had a trick ball to spring on a rival, whom he identified merely as "Old Jim."

The idea seems to switch balls on a green, so that the trick ball would hop and hop when Old Jim putted. The ball delivered the goods. Only the commissioner got it mixed with good ones and sprung it on himself.

It danced right away from the cup at a crucial time. The commissioner then threw it away—and how he threw!

She is small, dark-haired and wears tortoise shell glasses. She came down from her room in the lodging house and met authorities at the door. They informed her they would like to speak to her in private.

"If you've got anything to say, say it right here," she told them.

So they notified her New York detectives were in Boston seeking the fugitive's estranged daughter for questioning in two attempts on Diamond's life and in connection with the fire-torture of two New York State farmers, a sordid affair for which Diamond is under $25,000 bonds.

"I don't know why," said Mrs. Strassnick. "They know very well she's in New York State and not in any part of New England."

The Boston police informed her they were anxious to afford protection to Marion if she was here, inasmuch as the same gunmen that placed Diamond on the flat of his back might be turned in her direction.

NEED NO ASSISTANCE

"My daughter needs no assistance from the authorities," she said. "The New York police gave me no assistance when I wanted to take my daughter away from Diamond several months ago when I was in New York.

"As a matter of fact, the police don't want to see us. The only reason they're looking for her here is they want to question her.

"I don't want to be bothered by anybody. I have troubles enough. I don't want to be hampered here at my home. I don't know anything about my daughter's affairs and I haven't been to New York for seven months."

REFUSED TO RETURN HOME

She went to New York after Diamond was shot down in the Hotel Monticello just after breakfasting with Marion in her room. She tried to get Marion to return to Boston with her, but Marion was just turned 21 and on her own. She appealed to police, and police told her they couldn't do anything about it, as Marion was of age.

It was disclosed today that the authorities took the statement of Robbins, of Marlboro st., and Hiram Watson Bibley, son of Mr. and Mrs. F. Hedges Bibley, of Rochester N. Y., whose engagement was announced today.

Man Who Killed 5 by Gas, Electrocuted

Columbus, O., May 1 (AP)—Charles King, 39-year-old barber, was electrocuted at Ohio penitentiary last night for the slaying of his son Robert, who, with his mother and three brothers, was killed by gas in their home at Hamilton two years ago.

King was tried on only one charge, that of asphyxiating his son Robert although the rest of the family was named in the indictment.

MISS LUFKIN IS CALLED 'CRANK'

She wouldn't go to a Boston bank because she saw green snakes there.

She was a crank for legislation to curb powers of judges.

She wanted to half her burial lot so her brother's wife couldn't be buried there.

These similar statements were made today by Dean Homer Albers of Boston University Law School, in Dedham court in describing alleged mental weaknesses of Miss Elizabeth Lufkin, 70, of Quincy, for whom a conservator is sought.

Miss Lufkin is a sister of John W. Lufkin, who died last May after he gained notoriety through a proposed marriage to a girl half his age. With Dean Albers are the U. S. Trust Co., Miss Lufkin is an executor of her brother's $685,000 will.

The petition for a conservator for Miss Lufkin was brought by John W. Brooks of Newbury st. Back Bay, a relative, and six others.

Crooks testified that Miss Lufkin was eccentric and that her brother had clothes her from his suits at a Back Bay hotel.

Living in Hospital Is Work, Welfare Official Rules

Is a contagious hospital a house, or what is it?

William J. Brickley, Jr., provisional visitor for the welfare department at Everett, denies that an Everett family is living in a house rent free.

"They are living in the old Contagious Hospital, this man with a wife and three children," he said, "with the understanding that they maintain the property and prevent damage to the building by vandals."

Brickley says this man was the only one on the welfare list who was willing to move into the hospital with his family and that he pays no rent, but keeps the building in readiness for an epidemic.

were seized, and that she entered the Acra home when they would not tell where they were taking a truckload of cider.

the Common, where the "Reds" had a permit to hold their meeting. Three men, with red flags, red guns, gas guns and tear gas bombs followed them.

SIGNS SUPPRESSED.

As the meeting got under way, Supt. Michael H. Crowley in civilian clothes took his stand in front of the speakers' rostrum to listen for incendiary remarks.

Occasionally during the meeting the radicals raised aloft their signs, and Crowley promptly ordered them concealed, the order being quickly complied with.

The largest sign was ordered removed earlier, and its owners were so slow in complying that Lieut. William Lewis instructed Patrolman Herbert A. Grace to tear it down, which the officer did with the aid of a hammer.

Hecklers who interrupted the speakers were accused by Harry Canter, chairman of the meeting, of having been sent from the patriotic celebration of the Veterans of Foreign Wars on another part of the Common.

Canter also called for boos for Cong. Hamilton Fish, chairman of the committee investigating Communistic activities in America, and principal speaker at the patriotic celebration, which was arranged as an offset to the radical demonstration.

The following cablegram was read by Canter, who said it would be sent to Moscow later today:

"Communist Party, Soviet Union:

"Boston proletariat assembled in May Day demonstration on historic Boston Common hails mighty advance of Socialism under the Five-Year Plan and stands ready to defend the Soviet Union."

Solomon Motzkin, 18, of 76 Granville ave., Malden, fainted during the meeting and was taken to Haymarket Relief Hospital, where he was revived.

In many other cities throughout the world, demonstrations ordered by chiefs of the Third International for World Revolution at Moscow were taking places today.

Demonstrations are planned for tonight in several Massachusetts mill cities. A meeting scheduled for this noon at New Bedford was a fizzle, only 15 radicals appearing.

Police earlier today found the Common littered with highly inflammatory posters and orders were quickly given to arrest all persons seen distributing these.

The patrol of police outside the walls of State Prison was discovered on duty at daybreak. It had not been revealed in police plans as announced last night, but Capt. William Livingston of the Charlestown division admitted it was a precaution against any disturbance the radicals might foment.

ESTRANGED KING AND QUEEN MEET AT BEDSIDE OF SICK SON

PRINCE MICHAEL IS VICTIM OF DIPHTHERIA

Helen, Warned Not to Run the Risk of Contagion, Replies: "My Place Is at His Side"

Bucharest, Rumania, May 1 (AP)—While estranged father and mother stared coldly at each other from opposite sides of his sick-bed, Michael, the boy who was King of Rumania, today lay suffering with diphtheria.

Two injections of serum administered by the royal physicians were believed to have averted serious danger of death, although it was said anxiety for the patient must continue. Michael today was running a high temperature.

The physicians warned Queen Helen, mother of Michael, that she must not run the risk of contagion by too constant attendance upon the nine-year-old patient.

QUEEN IS WARNED.

Helen looked at King Carol, who was standing near her room, and replied:

"What is life to me? I have only one child. I never shall have another. My place is at his side."

Carol, breaking a near silence of months, in which he is said to have spoken to her only from over his shoulder, reiterated the physician's warning, and assured her Michael had trustworthy nurses and attendants. But He'en only shook her head.

It is the second time this year that Michael has been ill. He suffered a chill and influenza in January. Some concern was felt by the royal family last year at the boy's tendency to obesity.

POLITICAL TROUBLES.

Recently King Carol instructed attendants to teach him everything about automobile mechanics.

Carol, as he was called to the bedside of Michael in Helen's quarters in the Sinaia Palace, at the same time was having his political troubles. Premier Jorga had dissolved Parliament and called new elections for next month, despite widespread popular protests.

Crowds which shouted "Long live the King" in answer to shouts of other crowds which cheered the new Spanish republic ranged the streets of Bucharest during the night.

Out Where West Separates East

—By Arthur "Bugs" Baer—

In a bid for the summer trade Reno is speeding up its divorces to one hundred a day.

Under Nevada's modern plan of increasing the longevity of alimony our life partnerships will now last six weeks.

Six weeks are only forty-two days. Which isn't long when you figure in Saturday half-holidays and Sundays.

Any couple should stay married that long until debts them in part.

Being married is reason enough.

When the judge discovers you are legally married, he bursts into tears, the jury sobs out a certified decision and you have added another battle flag to the national museum of discontent.

Reno only manufactured 2149 divorces last year. This year it hopes to better its mark of for better or for worse.

It looks as if Nevada is seceding from the union two at a time.

But Reno legislation can be made more abrupt. We hope to see the time arrive when a wedding guest throws rice at the bride and it smacks the divorce judge in the face.

MANIAC HOLDS SHIP IN TERROR

San Diego, Cal., May 1 (INS)—Whether the Santa Cecilia, a Philadelphia freighter with a crew of 30 men, was under the control of a maniac who had smashed the ship's radio apparatus, puzzled shipping authorities heretoday.

From a point off Lower California, the ship's captain wired the following to the naval district in San Diego:

"Santa Cecilia needs aid. Are naval vessels near us? We have a maniac on board armed and violently insane."

The naval district notified the Santa Cecilia that no naval vessels were near, and asked for details of the trouble on board.

Silence indicated the maniac had smashed the ship's radio, and possibly was in control of the ship, with a crew helpless to overpower the armed man.

Early last night the Santa Cecilia asked San Diego by radio if there was a hospital at Acapulco, a Mexican port, and it was believed the captain had intended to dock there to place the maniac under medical care.

REVOLT ON TWO SPANISH SHIPS

Madrid, May 1 (AP)—The Ministry of Marine, in a communique today, declaring that the Spanish Navy was loyal to the republic, revealed that there had been some disturbance aboard two warships. The statement said:

"It is entirely false that there have been revolts against the republic among the Spanish sailors. There have, however, been two small incidents on the cruiser Blasleo, anchored at Cadiz, and on the destroyer Ferrandis, anchored at Cartagena. These were not communistic in character. Quick intervention put down the disturbances.

"The navy desires only to consolidate the republic and its discipline is perfect. I am studying plans to bring before the forthcoming constituent Cortes which will materially better their status, to the entire benefit of the state."

It is believed the incidents alluded to grew out of the action of boatswains of those vessels leaving their posts and coming to Madrid to ask for pay increases.

Barcelona, May 1 (AP)—Members of the Catalonian government were called together in a special session at midnight for conference. It was believed, on growing difference between the Barcelona and Madrid governments.

REBELLION IN CHINA SPREADS

Shanghai, May 1 (AP)—Conflicting reports were received here today from Canton and Hongkong concerning a threatened rebellion of independent semi-military forces spreading throughout Kwangtung and Kwangsi provinces against the Nanking government.

One unconfirmed report was that Nationalist authorities fled from Canton, Kwangtung capital, surrendering control to the independents. Another unconfirmed report said martial law had been declared at Canton.

Probably the most authoritative report, however, was that the Kwangtung capital remained quiet and that no political upheavals had occurred. This dispatch said wild rumors were circulating owing to a run on the government's Canton Central Bank.

REBELS BEATEN AT FUNCHAL

Lisbon, Portugal, May 1 (AP)—The Government claimed today its expeditionary force sent to Madeira to bring that island back under Lisbon authority had landed troops near Funchal and routed the rebels back upon the city at several points.

The landing was made under cover of the bombardment of the city, and a number of shells from the warships Vasco da Gama and Vouga fell in populous sections of Funchal, which was believed here to have been deserted by civilians.

The government claimed one-third of the island of Madeira already was in its hands and three volumes of troops marching on Funchal had occupied Sao Vicente, Ganano do Lobis and Machico.

The fall of Funchal was considered certain, as the rebels had abandoned positions on the heights, chief points of the city's defense, and government troops already had reached the city's outskirts.

During the bombardment, seaplanes flew over Funchal and dropped a number of bombs on the rebel positions.

The revolutionary junta which has controlled Madeira for a month claimed a victory. The insurgent communique said the landing party rallied in disorder, leaving war material and a number of prisoners.

NEW QUAKES IN SOVIET AREA REPORTED

Moscow, May 1 (AP)—Continuing earthquakes in the Sanguesur district of the Soviet Republic of Asberaijan, Transcaucasia, were believed today to have added to the loss of life and property damage already sustained by the area in tremors of the past two days.

Unofficial estimates of the dead there and in parts of Armenia reached 500, with many more injured. Residents have deserted the stricken villages and are living in the open.

So many victims are still buried under the ruins of their homes that it is impossible to make an accurate estimate of the cost in lives.

There is no word from many of the outlying villages. Forty-four little settlements in the neighborhood of Ordubat were reported destroyed. The government is sending in carloads of food, provisions and medicine.

THE BROOKSES, ALL HANDS, SEE THE CIRCUS

By WIN BROOKS

I go about my duties today under the burden of a great sorrow—the knowledge that in the eyes of the little Brookses I am very much of a dud of a daddy.

I cannot turn forward somersaults on a wire. I cannot sit a horse, let alone stand on my head on one. I will not allow myself to be run over by a steam-roller. My tummy will not blow up and bust. Nor will I leap from a platform 60 feet in the air with my wife on my back.

Further than that, I am in wrong, for in moments of confusion I entered into verbal contracts to procure for the little Brookses one elephant, one clown with red hair and big feet, a trained seal (or two if I can manage) and a big cannon "like they shoot the man out of."

The peanuts are digested, the balloons are burst, the peanuts are broken and the kids have seen their first circus. For me, there is only one way out: I must raise the cash and join the firm, making it Ringling Bros. and Barnum & Bailey & Brooks.

To comprehend fully the predicament in which I find myself, start with me at the beginning.

I have always been a circus bug. My wife is a circus fan.

For a long time we had been looking forward to the day when the little Brookses would be old enough to attend their first circus with their fond parents.

That day was yesterday. Nancy is nearly six. Betsy is four.

"Well take them," my wife decided, "and if you've got to write a story about the circus you can write what they say."

So we took them. Nancy talks a lot, being in that respect like . . (uh, uh, start over.) Nancy talks a lot. She said a good many things. In Betsy I was a bit disappointed. Except for an occasional utterance she sat mutely entranced, eyes popping, very grave.

DADDY TAKES HIS NOTES

What Betsy said I jotted down with the left hand while with the right I kept running notes on Nancy's comment. Betsy said this:

"I want some peanuts.
"I want to give the ephelunt a peanut, too.
"Buy me a balloon, daddy.
"Buy me a umbrella, daddy.
"Can I have a ephelunt?
"Why can't I have a ephelunt?
"Will you get him tomorrow, daddy?
"Can I have some more peanuts?
"Why can't I have some more peanuts?
"My balloon broke.
"Can I have another balloon?
"Why can't I have another balloon?
"A red balloon.
"I don't want to go home.
"Can I take a ephelunt?
"Why can't I take a ephelunt?
"Will you bring him home tomorrow?
"Can I go again tomorrow?"

Undoubtedly I missed something here and there and some things I purposely omitted; you know how those things are.

NANCY WANTS "ELEPHUN"

With Nancy things were a bit different. As Betsy demanded an "ephelunt," so Nancy demanded an "elephun," but finally decided one would do for both and that we could keep him in the garage. She spoke as follows:

"Look at the elephun squashing the man, daddy. Look at the elephuns squashing the little baby elephun. What do the elephuns eat, mother, Do they sleep in a bed?

"Look at the little baby man and the little baby lady. Look at the big, fat lady. Is she fatter than Mrs. ——?

"Look at the man on the rope, daddy. Can you stand on your head on the rope? Why can't you stand on your head on the rope?

"Look at the man doing a somersault in the air. I can do a somersault. Can you do that, daddy? Could mother do it?

"What are those things, daddy? Can I have a seal? Will you get me a seal? Will you get Betsy a seal?

"Daddy, look at the man and the lady jumping on the horse. Can you jump on the horse like that, daddy?

AND A SEA "ELEPHUN"

"Look at the big seal in the auto, daddy. Can I have a sea elephun? What's the man giving him, daddy? Is that the kind of fish you catch, daddy? (Side remarks by Mrs. Brooks.)

"Look at the man with the big tummy. That man has got a bigger tummy than Mr. ——, hasn't he, daddy? Can you get a big tummy like that? Can he come out and play with me?

"Look at the man in his underwear, daddy? Why doesn't he get dressed? Look at the little duck pulling the man in the cart. Can I have a duck for my cart?

"Daddy, look at the man with the lady on his back way up high. Look, look, daddy, he jumped off! He jumped on his tummy. Will he do it again? Ask him, daddy. Could you do it? Could you jump with mother on your back and land on your tummy?

"What's that, daddy? What's a cannon? What do they shoot with the cannon? Look, daddy, at the man getting in the cannon. Look, daddy, the man came out of the cannon. Will you get me a cannon like that that they shoot the man out of? Can I shoot it? Can I shoot you out of it? What did mother say?"

And so on, until an usher came and said that Boston Garden would be closed until the next performance.

You can see why I'm in wrong; anybody can see why I'm in wrong. It would take an old master to see the way out.

In the interim, the little Brookses are going to the circus again tomorrow under the sole and able guidance of their mother.

MOBS MENACE LADY CYNTHIA

Ashton-under-Lyne, England, May 1—Sir Oswald Mosley and his wife, Lady Cynthia Mosley, were nearly mobbed last night by a crowd of angry Laborites, following the defeat of A. Young, the Mosley New Party candidate for Parliament, in the first bye-election in which the party has been a contestant.

In the bye-election, Young ran a bad third, and the seat, now held by the Labor party, was won by the Conservative candidate.

Sir Oswald and Lady Cynthia, with a group of wealthy young Socialists, seceded from the Labor party some time ago to organize the New Party.

While the crowd howled, Sir Oswald bade the women of his party remain in the town hall, while he went out alone. Young, the defeated candidate, was smuggled out a side door under heavy police guard.

Sir Oswald made is way, guarded by police, safely to his hotel headquarters through the mob.

Mexico Goes Back to Standard Time

Mexico City, May 1 (AP)—After four and a half months of astronomical time, Mexico at midnight last night turned the clock ahead an hour to return to official time, which is the same as Central standard time in the United States.

Escapes Mob

Following defeat of the Mosley New Party candidate for Parliament, Lady Cynthia and her husband, Sir Oswald Mosley, who recently led a secession from the Labor Party, were nearly mobbed in Ashton-under-Lyne, England, last night.

DEBS TRAINING TO MEET KING

London, May 1 (INS)—Debutantes have gone into strict training in preparation for the four royal courts to be held in the throne room of Buckingham Palace May 19, and 25, and June 9 and 10.

Fashionable schools of deportment in the Mayfair area are doing a flourishing business teaching American and British debs how to make a curtsey without getting their feet tangled, how to carry their bouquets at the proper angle, and, last but not least, the correct way of walking across a highly-polished floor without stumbling over the customary yard long train.

All carry fans in place of the usual bouquet carried by debs being presented at court, while some wore high combs fixed in the hair to represent the tiny triple spray of ostrich feathers usually worn by presentees.

Henry Ford Buys an Estate in England

Chelmsford, Essex, Eng., May 1 (AP)—Announcement was made today that Henry Ford had purchased Boreham House, a handsome 18th century mansion near this town, and probably would reside there from time to time. He has large business interests in Essex.

VAGABOND BOY HELD AGAIN

Worcester, May 1—Police here today were confronted with a problem in the person of Herbert E. Glenn, 17, arrested for vagrancy while begging from house to house.

The youth, whose home is in Los Angeles, told the officers he left his Pacific coast home in January and was tired of his travels.

"I've been arrested 15 times in 15 states since I started bumming my way across the country, and I'd like to get back home," he said.

He was held by authorities who were unwilling to turn him back to the open road to add to his string of arrests. His capital when he left home, he said, was 35 cents, and, since that is exhausted now, the matter of his return fare is a considerable item.

Injured in Riot at Train in Cairo

Cairo, Egypt, May 1 (AP)—Four members of the Wafdist, or Nationalist, party and two policemen were injured today in a fight at the railway station. Five hundred Wafdists and Liberals attempted in the melee to rush the guarded gates to a train for Tanta, where an electoral campaign meeting was being held.

Juniors' Dance

Rose Rooney of Cambridge is a member of the committee in charge of the Emmanuel College junior class dance which will take place tonight at the Ritz-Carleton Hotel. Jeanne Steinbrenner of Quincy is chairman of the committee.

BISHOP CANNON ASKED TO QUIT

Nashville, Tenn., May 1 (AP)—The College of Bishops of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, assembled here today for its semi-annual meeting, with communications asking for the resignation of Bishop James Cannon, Jr., ready for presentation.

Bishop John M. Moore, secretary of the college, said he had received the communications against Cannon and would lay them before the gathering.

During the past week several reports have been published that a petition was being circulated among Methodist laymen to prevent the Virginia prelate from taking his turn under a rule of rotation as president of the college.

In reply to these reports both Bishop Moore and Bishop W. N. Ainsworth said a few days ago that they knew nothing of any petition, and that Cannon would become president unless the four-year-old rule was broken. Cannon was eligible last December for the presidency, but charges were then pending against him. The charges were subsequently dismissed.

New All-Steel Homes Will Make Life Worth Living

White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., May 1 (AP)—The all-steel home of the future will be built in a wide variety of sizes and styles —to meet the whim or the fancy of the owner, manufacturers of sheet and strip steel, attending the ninth annual conference of flat rolled steel executives, were told here today.

The delegates listened to discussion of houses that will be quickly assembled, will sell for from $3000 to $5000 and solve the present difficulty of the average man to build, buy or rent a new four-room house or apartment.

Bank Bandit Kills Policeman in Fight

Chicago, May 1 (AP)—A witness in the Lingle murder case—Traffic Policeman Anthony Ruthy, 43—was shot to death last night by an alleged bank robber, barely 100 feet from the spot where Alfred Lingle was assassinated little less than a year ago.

Ruthy was killed by Frank Jordon of Chicago, who fired his pistol at the policeman in full view of hundreds.

World Girdler at Manila

Manila, May 1 (AP)—Edward Miles, circumnavigating the world in a 35-foot boat, the Sturdy II, sailed today for Hongkong.

2 OF SANDINO'S LEADERS SLAIN

Managua, Nicaragua, May 1 (AP)—Two contacts of the Nicaraguan National Guard with the Insurgent forces of Gen. Augusto Sandino were reported to Guardia headquarters here today.

Ten members of the Guardia, commanded by Lieut. Truesdale, clashed with an Insurgent group near the town of Las Cuchillas Tuesday noon and killed Carmen Lopez, a subchief of Sandino. Ten of the Insurgents were wounded.

In another clash Monday between Aguacate and Ojo De Agua, the Truesdale patrol killed Senor Chavarria, Sandino appointe as governor of Pozoelo district.

GUNMAN NAMED AS SLAYER OF DANCE GIRL

Yonkers, N. Y., May 1 (AP)—Police turned their investigation into new channels today when witnesses to the fatal shooting of Virginia Brannen, a dance hall hostess, retracted their first story.

Arrested two days ago Mrs. Mildred Moore and Robert Le Clair, said they were in the front seat of an auto with "Thomas Jordan" when they heard shots and looking "saw the Brannen girl crumpled on the cushions and "Jordan" with a revolver in his hand."

Today they identified "Jordan" as Francis Crowley, and said that he, instead of Rudolph Durniger, was in the back seat. Durniger, they told police, was beside them in the front seat, driving.

Crowley is wanted as the man who shot and wounded a Bronx detective a month ago as the detective was about to ask about the shooting of two American Legion members at a dance late in February. Ballistics experts say the shots fired on those occasions came from the gun that killed Miss Brannen.

Other "taxi-dancers" raised $100 to help defray the expenses of Miss Brannen's funeral. The services will be held in Bangor, Me., her home.

MANIACS SLAY A PRISON GUARD

Lima, O., May 1 (AP)—Two insane convicts of the Lima Hospital for the Criminal Insane strangled to death Louis Kiehl, 48, a guard, early today and attempted to escape.

One of the convicts, Samuel Nelson, 19, a negro, eluded the guards and escaped, but the other, John Powell, 24, white, of Columbus, was captured as he attempted to flee.

The prisoners seized Kiehl while he was making his rounds and forced him into a lavatory where they strangled him.

Other guards rushed into the ward room and saw Powell attempting to get through a window. They dragged him back, but Nelson had disappeared when they reached the hospital grounds.

U. S. Cold Wave Kills Parrots From Andes

Syracuse, N. Y., May 1 (AP)—Cold weather has deprived the returning Syracuse University Andean expedition of several live specimens of the parrot family, brought from interior Venezuela for research work in the university laboratories. A number of the birds died on the way by truck from New York city, where the expedition landed Tuesday.

Osborn to Quit as U.S. Museum Head in 1933

New York, May 1 (AP)—Prof. Henry Fairfield Osborn, president of the American Museum of Natural History, will retire Jan. 1, 1933, after a quarter century of service in that capacity, it was announced today.

Sailor Stirred Romance in Dime-a-Dance Girl

By WILLIAM G. HOSIE

New York, May 1—Ten cents a dance . . . Hold me, big boy . . . Gee, but the music is swell tonight.

The taxi dancer, slowly grinding out her youth to the throb of jazz, trampling her hopes and dreams and ambitions beneath her dancing feet.

Trumpets are breaking my ear drums,

Customers crushing my toes."

But she laughs with her tired young eyes. Her roughed lips slash her face into a smile. She is only 18 or 20 or 22 and she is just like any other girl of that age.

Some day Prince Charming will come riding by . . . Some day her hero will swing her up on his charger and away they will go to that distant land of Romance, away from the muted trumpet, away from the blare of jazz, away from the—

Ten cents a dance.

Virginia Christina Brannen had met her Knight. His shining armor was a workman's blouse and a steady job and green eyes that smiled when he called her "honey."

CLEAN PAGE FOR HER

Romance, love, everything that her girl-heart cried out for, all were hers because of this red-headed sailor lad, Harry Miller.

She told him her love before she told him her name. He loved her when he thought her name was Joyce. Her real name, the name by which she was known in her home town of Bangor, Me., was one of her first confidences in her man.

"My real name, honey, is Virginia Christina Brannen," she whispered.

Miller pulled out a little book in which he had written the names of girls he had known when he was in the navy. Opposite each name was a cross.

"The X marks them washed up, finished," he told her.

"You're not going to put my name in that book and mark an X after it," said Virginia.

"Now, honey, be reasonable. I won't put it back here with the rest of them. I'll give you a clean page."

He thumbed the pages of the little book. It was of the diary type. And on the page marked January 8 he wrote down her name.

URGED FRESH START

"That's my birthday," she said. "I'm 23 years old."

He told her that his birthday would come on April 23. He said he was 24 years old, but wasn't honest about that. He was only 21, and, he was afraid that if this dance-hall queen realized his youth he would lose her.

Virginia tried to tell Miller of the men she had known. But he didn't want to listen.

"Don't worry about that, baby," he said. "I've got a pretty bad past myself., I've been places and seen a lot. You don't want to hear about that and I don't want to hear about all the things you've done.

"I've always noticed that the girls who have knocked around a little and know a few things about life make better wives than the girls who have always been good. So don't worry about anything you've ever done. We'll close the book and start clean together."

This was a new kind of man to Virginia—not like the motorcycle cop who used to beat her when he got drunk, not like the sleek-haired dance-hall cake-eaters who filled her with bad gin and took her on wild apartment parties, not like the smooth Summer resident who lured her from the restaurant in Bangor, where she worked when she was 18 years old, to a beach bungalow and made her drink beer till she didn't know what she was doing.

SWEEP TOWARD TRAGEDY

She told Harry that she liked to drink and that when she drank she didn't know what she was doing.

"I love you, honey," he said. "I'm not ashamed to be seen anywhere with you. You've only got two bad points—drinking and swearing. I wish you'd try to cut them out."

"I'll try, Harry, honest I will."

These two children in love—the hard dime a dance girl and sailor lad, who thought he had a past—even then were being swept by inexorable forces toward terrible tragedy . . . Death on a lonely road for the girl . . . Misery for the boy.

Virginia tried to be good, tried not to drink, tried to keep away from the men to whom she was but a plaything. But the hand that pulls the strings for the ten cents a dance puppets would not let her escape so easily.

The very next afternoon found her in a speakeasy. While Miller worked Virginia drank with one of the sinister figures that would not let her forget her past.

Miller called for her that evening at the home of Mrs. Alice Perro. Virginia's eyes were glassy. Her speech was thick. She did not even recognize her lover. It was two hours before the fiery fumes of bootleg-gin were cleared from her clouded brain.

PROMISES AGAIN

When she awoke to the realization that she had broken her word to the man she loved, the body that so many men had held was wrecked with sobs.

"Harry, I love you. I don't mean to do these things, but they have such a hold on me. I can't help it. If I could only be with you all the time. I know things would be different."

"I love you, too, hon," said Harry. "I don't mind if you take a drink once in a while, only use a little common sense. Don't try to drink the town dry."

TALKED OF MARRIAGE

"I'll do my best, Harry. But you must remind me of it every day. Remind me that you love me and remind me that I mustn't drink."

Poor Virginia! Trying to fight the forces that held her so fast, trying to be good. A fluttering moth trying to escape the flame.

She must have had some premonition, even then, of the sinister forces that were gathering to crush her. She must have had some quiver of fear.

For suddenly she shifted the talk away from the sticky web of her environment. She told Harry of Bangor, of the sea breaking against the rocks, of her father's little house and the flowers in the garden. It seemed so much more real than the ten cents a dance whirl on a floor not much bigger than a prize ring.

"You know, Harry," she said, "I'd like to take you back there with me. I'd like to have you up there as my very own."

"But I don't get no vacation this year," said Harry. "Only there's a rumor around the place that we're going to get one day off for every month we worked since the first of the year, which would give me a week in September."

"That's a wonderful time of the year up there. We'll go up there on our honeymoon after we're married."

It was the first time that marriage had been mentioned between these two lovers and the mention came as a shock to Miller. He was afraid to tell his parents that he was going to be married.

He was afraid to shoulder the responsibilities of marriage on his $26.88 a week as a splicer's helper. But he accepted the idea without question.

"I figured it would take about a year to get ready to get married," he said. "But maybe we could make it by September if we both saved all our money."

NEEDED SETTLING

Neither of them had the slightest idea of the mechanics of getting married. They didn't know how one went about getting a license, or how much it cost. They knew, vaguely, that people always tried to save quite a bit of money before they took that particular stride in life's adventure, but they didn't understand the why and wherefore.

Virginia said that she didn't have to work during the day and she could make inquiries and learn just what had to be done in order to marry and just how much money was needed.

"But, honey," said Miller, "if things come to a climax and we got married, you know you'll have to settle down."

"I know it. That's just what I need."

The forces are gathering to prevent Virginia Brannen's escape from the ten cents a dance racket. Tomorrow the American will reveal how Virginia saw the fearsome shadow of death hovering over her and how her life was snuffed out when she tried to flee.

MEMORIES OF DEATH RIDE BRING TEARS

Mildred Moore, 30, and her boy friend, Robert Le Clair wept as they told in court the story of the ride which ended in death for Virginia Brannen, Bangor, Me., girl, in Yonkers, N. Y. Le Clair and Miss Moore were riding in the front seat of the death car. (I. N. photo.)

U. OF ILLINOIS INSTALS CHASE

Urbana, Ill., May 1 (AP)—A panoply of academic pomp marked the installation today of Harry Woodburn Chase as sixth president of the University of Illinois, third largest in America.

Six thousand guests lined the route along which representatives of 150 universities and the entire faculty of Illinois' State University marched to the gymnasium, scene of Dr. Chase's induction.

Gowned in academic black, but with capes and tasseled caps of many colors, professors and officials of many colleges paraded to the music of the university's regimental band of 200 pieces. The university's concert band of 125 pieces played for the ceremonies inside the gymnasium.

Harvard, one of the oldest of American universities, was represented as well as the University of Mexico, founded in 1551.

Prince of Wales Has Narrow Escape From Auto

London, May 1—The Prince of Wales, only a day home from his South American trip, narrowly escaped being run down by an automobile.

The Prince was leaving the Sunningdale golf course clubhouse when he stepped in front of a car. The driver brought it to a screeching halt, while the Prince jumped aside.

M'DONALD HITS HOUSE OF LORDS

Worksop, Eng., May 1 (AP)—If the Labor government were turned out and the Conservatives came in, Ramsay MacDonald declared in a speech today, they would have no better chance of solving the unemployment problem than the present ministry.

He launched an attack on the House of Lords, which, he said, must be subjected to the mandate of the people. The upper house, he said, closes its eyes when the Conservatives are in power and only interferes when the Liberals and Laborites are in the saddle. Continued government recognition of the House of Lords, said he, "must depend on the Lords' doing their duty."

The Worksop constituency is represented in the House by Alastair MacDonald, the prime minister's son.

Girl, 15, to Start Regular Air Service

Chicago, May 1 (INS)—Vivian Graham, 15-year-old granddaughter of Mayor Cermak, today was the principal figure in ceremonies at the municipal airport inaugurating a new airplane service between Chicago and New York. The mayor and members of his cabinet also participated.

The girl signalled the start of the tri-motored plane that made the first trip of the daily service on the line of the Transcontinental and Western Air Lines, Inc., affiliated with the Pennsylvania Railroad.

45 Bodies Taken From Arsenal Ruins

Rio de Janeiro, May 1 (AP)—Forty-five bodies were recovered today from the ruins of the naval arsenal in Nichtheroy, destroyed by an explosion in the torpedo-loading plant yesterday.

Thirty-eight were identified and firemen were searching through the debris for others. Seventy injured are still in hospitals.

REVERE FIGHTS OIL FARM PLAN

A fight against the proposed 150,000,000 petroleum storage plant in Revere was launched last night at a protest meeting held under the auspice of the Revere Taxpayers' Association.

Several oil companies have leased land from the Green estate and the Boston Port Delevopment Company within the city limits and are seeking a permit from the city council to proceed with the construction of the storage tanks.

The taxpayers' association has scheduled additional meetings for Wednesday, Thursday and Friday nights of next week which will be addressed by Rep. Thomas F. Carroll of Revere. Rep. Carroll is leading the movement against the project which, he says, would expose the community to danger from fire and explosions.

PRATT SEEKS TO BAR REPORTERS

An order to bar reporters from the lobby and reading room of the House of Representatives at the State House was offered today by Rep. C. F. Nelson Pratt of Saugus, incensed at a news story of his wordy battle with Rep. Francis E. Rafter of Salem yesterday.

The order was automatically referred to the House committee on rules.

Pratt and Rafter nearly came to blows yesterday over Rafter's request for a roll call on the bill to furnish legislators with identification badges.

The two clashed after Rafter chided the Saugus solon for remarks he considered personal. At the height of the argument, Pratt withdrew and today objected to the publication of the details.

For years the reporters have been recognized by the House and Senate through the Massachusetts State House Reporters' Association.

The Nonantum committee met rebuffs from every side until they finally turned in desperation to Mr. Volpe. He brought matters to a head.

"I had camped on Vaughan's trail for two years," said Chairman Amicell today. "I know the temper of depositors in Newton. I know, that a dividend no matter how small would help pacify them. I often had difficulty finding Receiver Vaughan despite frequent visits at his office and long waiting.

"I had faith in him until February when he told me he had filed a petition but failed to. On February 9 I wrote Receiver Vaughan a long letter outlining conditions in Nonantum. I concluded that letter by stating that depositors were flocking to me asking if Vaughan had played the stock market and lost in the slump, if he was bonded and if I thought anything would be left of the money.

SAYS LETTER IGNORED

"Mr. Vaughan ignored that letter. He never answered it. He snubbed in a similar manner, depositors who sought an explanation at his office.

"In discussing the affairs of Nonantum Bankers, Inc., with me one day Receiver Vaughan raised the point that he doubted whether persons who had deposited with the bank before its president, Amata Pescosolito, had been bonded, would be entitled to dividends.

"He promised to file a petition to settle the doubt, but didn't. He always seemed sparring "for time."

Mrs. Maria Amendola, 70, a widow, living in the rear of 190 Adams st., said she had deposited $300 the day before Nonantum Bankers, Inc., closed its doors.

"I went with my crippled son, Anthony, to see Receiver Vaughan," said Mrs. Amendola today. "As you see, my son has been paralyzed since he was six years old. He is 25 now and unable to work to support himself. He is a good boy. With him and my other children I am caring for my grandchild, John Maiguri, who is seven. Johnny's mother died some months ago. I have many burdens and much trouble.

Atty. George R. Farnum, counsel for Mr and Mrs Robert Vaughan parents of the missing receiver, in a statement today said they were more anxious than anyone to find their son.

DEFENDED BY PARENTS

They believe, he said that Vaughan can establish complete innocence of criminality, but fear he has suffered a mental and physical collapse from overwork.

"The splendid record he enjoyed in his profession," Atty. Farnum said, "as well as socially, convinces his friends that he can account for many things now being questioned.

"The family feel he never would have gone away but for a serious breakdown."

Mr. Farnum added that the strain on the missing man's parents was severe.

Following an interview today with Asst. Dist. Atty. Volpe, Atty. Gen. Warner said the most depositions in the five banks could hope to recover is $125,000, the amount of Vaughan's surety bond.

According to Volpe, Middlesex authorities are investigating several anonymous tips on Vaughan's whereabouts among them a report that he flew from Boston to Cuba in an airplane.

Bonner was present at the interview as was Henry O. Cushman bondsing agent for the Old Cosmopolitan Trust Co. and Vaughan's associate at that time.

HEAVY GUARD ON HATHAWAY ON COURT TRIP

merely nodded his head. He wore a suit of light gray and a bright red necktie. Between him and his twin brother, who sat with the father just outside the rail of the jury box, there was apparent a marked resemblance.

"I would ask your honor to assign June 8 for trial," said Atty.-Gen. McLyman. "I understand that is the first jury date in this country." He asked the defense to prevent delaying trial.

SPECIAL PLEA MAY 13

It was finally decided that Jacobs would file his special pleas by next Thursday and that they would be heard in Providence on May 13.

Hathaway did not lose his composure in court, nor did he lose it during the demonstration that marked his departure from the courthouse.

In court he gazed out a window, once clasped his hands behind his back, again folded his arms across his chest. Nearly all the time a smile played about his lips.

Guarded by state troopers and Newport police he was led from the courtroom still smiling and as he descended the courthouse steps the crowd broke into a roar. Boohs and catcalls were heard and in one or two instances profane language was used.

COVERS HIS FACE

He continued to smile although twice between the courthouse and the waiting police car he covered his face with his arm.

In the shouting crowd were many girl students from the high school which graduated Verna Russell before she went to Fall River to train in the nursing profession.

Through the crowd Newport police broke a path for the state troopers and the prisoner. Seated in the rear seat of the police auto between two troopers, with two motorcycle officers in front and two behind, he began his return trip to the Providence County jail.

Hathaway was brought here under extraordinary guard at 7:35 o'clock this morning.

THREE WOMEN ON JURY

The crowd began assembling outside the courthouse shortly afterward as the news spread. Six State troopers kept guard within the building and a dozen local policemen were on patrol outside, keeping the crowd clear of the courthouse lawn.

The jury—the March session recalled—included three women, Mrs. Elsie Friend, Mrs. Agnes Halliday and Mrs. Ada G. Jordan, all of Newport.

FEW SPECTATORS

Atty. Gen. McLyman occupied a seat reserved for counsel and his assistant, Sigmund W. Fischer, Jr., read the state's petition for recall of the jury. Deputy Sheriff Frank Kling actively represented the state.

A few spectators were admitted to the court before the jury retired to begin its deliberations based upon the evidence of several State witnesses.

Both floors of the courthouse were cleared of spectators.

With unusual precautions and the utmost secrecy, Hathaway's transfer from the Providence county jail, 25 miles away, was effected shortly after sunrise.

MAN SHOT FOR TAKING DRINK

Washington, May 1 (INS) - Two Virginia police used a blackjack and a pistol in dragging Leroy Holsinger, 40, of Washington, from his automobile when he refused to submit to arrest after they stopped his car and accused him of having taken a drink from a bottle.

Holsinger's wife watched the scuffle, which ended when one of the officers fired three shots into her husband's body. He is at a hospital here with bullet wounds in the hip and leg.

Police charge they found a small quantity of liquor in the machine.

For years doctors have been seeking a way to take photographs of the inside of the body's vital organs. A tiny camera has been invented which the medical profession has used successfully in taking pictures of the inside of the stomach. Read about it in the American Weekly Section of the next Boston Sunday Advertiser.

Kine, Swine, Lamb, Ham, Wool and Bull Spell Milk and Honey

Atlantic City, N. J., May 1 (AP)—In the opinion of F. E. Murphy, Minneapolis publisher, good farming is doing a better job than any "political hokus pokus" in making the Northwest "a land flowing with milk and honey and money."

Speaking at the 19th annual meeting of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States today, Mr. Murphy said there were no real "hard times" in "our land of the kine and swine, the lamb and the ham, the wool and the bull, the honey bee and the hennery—the cream pitcher of America."

Chinese Thousands Flee Flood Waters

Kiukiang, China, May 1 (AP)—Advices from Nanchang today said thousands of persons residing along the Kan river fled to the highlands to escape floods which wiped out their homes. The high water followed torrential rains in Central Kiangsi province. The loss of life was reported considerable

300 IN RENO'S DIVORCE RUSH

Reno, Nev., May 1—Reno today awaited the "big parade."

With a six weeks' divorce law effective today, some 300 men and women—mostly women—were looking forward to receiving the decrees that will sever their matrimonial ties early next week.

The first parade will be that of the lawyers. Promptly at 9 a. m tomorrow they will line up at the county clerk's office to file divorce actions for clients.

The parade of divorcees will take place next week when the suits are set for hearing.

Due to the peculiar wording of the law enacted by the last Legislature, few if any actions are expected to be filed today

"This act shall be in full force and effect from and after May 1, 1931," the law decreed.

Duke of Connaught 81

London, May 1 (AP)—The Duke of Connaught, King George's uncle is 81 years old today He was governor-general of Canada from 1911 to 1916.

FRANCE BALKS AT TREATY PLAN

Paris, May 1 (AP)—It was stated unofficially today that France would not accept Great Britain's proposals for ironing out the difficulties in the drafting of the Franco-Italian naval agreement.

Great Britain suggested, it is understood, that France and Italy sign the treaty on a limited naval building program which was announced on March 1, leaving the way open for France to outline her replacement needs at a naval conference in 1935

Such a proposal, it is asserted here, would place France in the position of asking permission in 1935 for what she considers now to be her right of replacement.

If Italy supports the British position, the French course, it is declared unofficially, will be to propose an interim agreement extending to 1934 on the building figures announced on March 1.

TWENTY MILLION FORDS

have been made since 1903

Long experience and unusual manufacturing facilities are reflected in the value of the Ford car today

Where the first Ford was made

THE Ford Motor Company was organized in 1903, but the idea of the car originated many years before that.

As far back as 1890, 1891 and 1892, Mr. Ford was working far into the night on what was then called a horseless carriage or a gasoline buggy. "It first began to run satisfactorily," he recalls, "in the spring of 1893. I was running it when the bobolinks came to Detroit and they always came on April 2nd."

This gasoline buggy was the first and for a long time the only automobile in Detroit. Interest was so great that it became necessary to chain the car to a lamp-post to prevent curious people from driving it away.

All of the earlier experiments on this car and a number of others that followed were conducted in a small one-room brick shop.

Finally, in 1903, the Ford Motor Company was organized and in 1908 the first Model T Ford was offered for sale. By the season of 1909-1910, the yearly output had increased to nineteen thousand and on May 31, 1921, the five millionth Ford came off the assembly line. Less than ten years later, on April 14th of this year, the total had reached twenty million. Production of the twenty-first million is now well under way.

These are tremendous figures, yet they hold an importance beyond mere size.

Each of these millions of Ford cars and trucks has played a part in the daily life and activity of some owner; extending his horizon, giving him increased opportunity for happiness and success, putting more worth-while hours into every day. In countless ways they have accelerated the pace and progress of this country and contributed to its growth.

Those who write the record of the past quarter of a century agree that the coming of the low-priced automobile changed our whole manner of living — of thinking — of doing!

Coincident with greater and greater demand for the Ford was the building of a vast industrial organization for its manufacture. The small brick shop became a series of plants covering thousands of acres, in every part of the world. The fruits of larger production are improved quality and craftsmanship, lower costs to the public, higher wages to the worker, and an industrial "back-log" of great value to the nation.

The Ford car of today is better because of the experience gained in making the millions of Ford cars and trucks that have preceded it. There is no substitute for time and experience. Ford materials and Ford methods are the product of both. The Ford name is built upon them. Today's Ford car, in everything that goes to make a good automobile, is unquestionably the greatest value in the history of the company.

BEAN HOLE BEANS

A North Woods Menu ...Tonight!

"They taste just like we cooked them in the camp bean hole," says one North Woods lumber cook. This recipe for "bean hole" beans—layers of beans and sugar-cured pork, cups of molasses and brown sugar—came to Van Camp's from the bean pots of the woods. Even the distinctive "outdoors" flavor has been reproduced for you. If you'd know why these beans are finer flavored—why appetites prefer them to any home-made beans—the proof awaits you. THE BIG SHOW

Elephants and camels, midgets and giants, gorgeous girls in spangles—especially that curly-haired one in the red dress—they are all standing around in the paddock . . . The bugle blares . . . Fred Bradna blows a shrill blast on his whistle . . . Eyes sparkle . . . Every head is turned toward the arena . . . The double doors are thrown open . . . "Let her go!"

Another year has started and the circus has come to town.

Will Rooks will tell you the real story of the circus in another column of this paper today . . . We will just tell you about some of the personalities in the Big Show . . . There's the winsome Miss Winifred, for instance . . . She's Con Colleano's sister . . . Winnie did her daring stunts on the high trapeze yesterday, the same smiling and gay little bit of loveliness that she always is . . . But all eyes of the performers were fastened on her every minute of the time she was in the air . . . Winnie tore a big piece in her shoulder while practicing Wednesday, but she insisted that no such thing as that would keep her from being on hand for the Boston opening . . . Then, there's the other Winifred Colleano, Con's wife . . . She's the dazzling blonde who works with Con . . . Mrs. Colleano is English . . . Her name was Stanley and she's a direct descendant of the Earl of Derby . . . No foolin' . . . Mrs. Colleano and Rosie Rieffenach were chosen yesterday by a group of newspaper men as the two most beautiful girls in the circus . . . Charlie Webber, one of the clowns, is one of the best known printed letters in the South with more than 15 knockouts to his credit . . . Doc Shields, the Big Show's physician, has an average of 55 patients a day from the circus family . . .

More good looking girls with the show this year than we've ever seen before . . . Maximo, who does that thrilling drunk act on the wire, is back on the job again after a nasty spill in Madison Square Garden . . . Betty Bell, daughter of Floyd (Met p. a.) Bell, who used to publicize the circus, was on hand to see Big Show for the 105th time and her little sister, Barbara, was seeing it for the first time . . . They were thrilled to pieces when all of the performers picked them out in their box and blew kisses to them from high up near the rafters of the Garden . . .

There was a larger crowd on hand for the opening yesterday than there was last year and the advance sale, according to Clarence Dawson, is considerably more than it was in past years . . . Billie Burke played hostess to the entire company playing "The Truth Game" . . . Most of them are Englishand it was their first visit to a circus . . . Miss Burke is the daughter of Billie Burke, the famous clown, so she was in her glory all afternoon . . . After the show we met John Slater, dean of the clowns, who used to play with Billie's father in the old days . . . It brought tears to John's eyes to see the famous daughter of his old friend . . .

Frank Braydon, Tom Killilea and Roland Butler, the circus press agents, were busier than the proverbial one armed paperhangers. Just to make the opening official Fred Bring of the Herald, Joe Carlin of the Post, Katherine Hartt of the Globe, Harold Rennison of the Traveler, and your humble servant, probably five of the most rabid circus fans in captivity, were on hand and running around herserk with That Gleam in our eyes . . . It was Old Home Day for Floyd Bell, too, who was getting the glad hand from everyone, right down to the lowliest roustabout . . . Three years ago we met Mickey McGeehan when he was dancing in the chorus of "Queen High" . . . Yesterday we met him again . . . He was working as an usher in the reserved seat section and as happy as a lark . . .

Hugo Zacchini, who risks his neck twice a day when he is shot from the cannon, was standing at the performers' entrance watching Alfredo Cadona do his thrilling double and triple somersaults on the high trapeze . . . Zacchini shook his head disprovingly . . . That fellow," he said, he's crs-s-s-zy"

SIGHTS AND SOUNDS

Amos 'n' Andy come to the Met for one day only for a personal appearance next Sunday . . . Things are so tough that Eddie (Majestic box office) Spellman has put one of his arms in a sling . . . And George Hassard reports that things are so tough with the miniature golf course owners that they're using moth balls to play around with these days . . . Aileen Stanley, headlining at the Keith-Boston this week, has been working so steadily for the past four years that her doctors have told her that she MUST take a rest or else . . . DISCONTENT IN CHURCH TRACED

New York, May 1 (US)—Individual trouble-makers in congregations are the chief cause of discontent and restlessness that has become widespread in the Presbyterian ministry.

This was revealed in the report of a special committee of the church that will be presented to the Presbyterian General Assembly in Pittsburgh, May 2.

The report open... "widespread restlessness"... it blamed it chiefly... congregational troubles. It... equal frankness... factor in an unhappy... the "great number of... ignorant of the... and accepted in the... without sufficient intellectual preparation.

PUPILS MUST CROSS TRACKS

With the opening of the new... Gibson elementary school at Medford today, pupils from six to 10 years old are obliged to cross the Boston & Maine tracks at West Medford, and parents are indignant.

When the school was built it was agreed that the city would construct a bridge over the tracks, but this was not done. Some pupils must walk nearly two miles from their homes to the railroad crossing at high at and then back along the other side of the tracks to school which is located only a few hundred feet from their homes across the tracks.

Parents are fearful the youngsters will take short-cuts over the railroad fences to their homes. They have asked that a police officer be stationed along the railroad tracks to guard against this.

Working Age for Children Set at 15

Employment of children in the state under 15 years of age is prohibited under a bill passed in the Senate. An amendment, however, was accepted exempting from the... children being educated in any subject or employment as musicians in a church, chapel, school or school exhibition, or taking part in any festival, concert or the like, upon the written permission of the board of aldermen or selectmen.

WOMEN LOSE IN BERMUDA

Hamilton, Bermuda, May 1 (US)—The fifth attempt in eight years to win suffrage for women was defeated in Parliament today by a vote of 21 to 11.

After they had watched from the gallery as the measure was voted down, members of the Women's Suffrage Society surrounded the flag pole on the Parliamentary building's grounds and lowered the blue ensign to half-mast.

Opponents of the bill were enraged at the sight; supporters laughed. Defeat of the measure suggested by the house secretary of state for colonies, may result in the appointment of a royal commision of inquiry, since the secretary had forwarded the bill to Parliament with the advice that there be some extension of the franchise, now unchanged since 1834."

The House returned the measure with the abrupt message:

"We are not disposed to make any change in the franchise."

FIVE AND TEN

By FANNIE HURST

Jennie Is Amazed Because Her Husband's Guest Isn't Ahead of Time

Mother and son—Jenny Rarick and Avery—portrayed by Irene Rich and Kent Douglass in the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer talking picture made from Fannie Hurst's famous novel, "Five and Ten."

What Has Happened So Far

John G. Rarick has made millions as a chain store operator. His wife, Jenny, shortly after their marriage, lent him $2500, all she had, when he was near failure, and out of this money he built riches. But Jenny resents his far-from-imposing appearance and no longer feels real love for him. She plans the social education of their children, Jennifer and Avery. The thought is always in her mind that without her $2500 Rarick would have achieved nothing. Her goading results in Rarick's agreeing to go East and to buy a magnificent home, but, secretly, he finds himself hating her. This is accentuated by his own temperamental inability to get close to his children. All their appeals to him are made through their mother. Rarick meets an odd genius, Dr. Felix Gerkes, an authority on art gems, and installs him in his house. Jenny objects to his presence and a bitter scene follows in which Rarick delivers the ultimatum that Gerkes remains He sends for Jennifer and compels her to cancel a dinner engagement to dine with Gerkes. Jennifer tells her father she almost hates him, but she has to give in.

Now Go On with the Story

By Fannie Hurst

Whose Novels Have Given Her a Reputation as One of the Foremost of Modern Writers.

(This famous story has been made into a talking picture by Metro - Goldwyn - Mayer with Marion Davies in the leading role.)

JENNY came in then, wearing a yellow satin gown that had been dry-cleaned to the color of an old tooth, and so shrunken that it spanned

"You look like the devil, darling," said Jennifer, and kissed her.

"I feel like him and his bride," said Jenny, stooping to draw up a thread that was raveling at her hem. "I thought you were having dinner at Shibby's."

"I'm dining at home with the Department of Arts and Sciences," said Jennifer, and dropped a large slow wink to her mother.

Across the island of the hunting-rug, Jenny regarded her husband with eyes that had no gleam

"I didn't mind cancelling the Dentons at the last moment and leaving a vacancy in her opera box, but I don't relish the idea of also being on Shibby Stuart's black list any more than you should, Rarick, considering your banking connections with them."

New Philosophy

"You leave my banking connections to me."

"Gladly."

"Never mind, Mother. Father and I have evolved a new philosophy of life. Less philosophy and more life."

"The philosophy, I suppose, that the rich are all mean and frivolous and vicious, and the poor holy and righteous."

He regarded her with the masked look to his face that would cause her to say over and over to herself

"Little man. Little man, you. Little fake Napoleon, you."

"Holy righteousness, my dear Jenny, cannot reside exclusively among the poor while you are you."

"Attaboy, Father!" said Jennifer, and jammed a pillow into the cave between the small of her back and the couch. "I can forgive a dirty dig if it's well dug. Can't you, Mother?"

Her mother glanced at her wrist watch, a singular and precious one, set into the plane surface of a square diamond

Huge Organ

"At that rate, Jenny, our average run of them must be morons."

"Life among the Raricks," sang out Jennifer, and buffing out the pillow, jumped to her feet and to some inner syncopated rhythm, began teetering on her slim toes down the great length of room that led to an organ at its far end

Carved down the pipes of the towering instrument was the legend of the St. Gregorian Mass, the meeting of Abraham and Melchisedec, and the Last Supper. A chime, somewhere in the complicated heart of the organ, which was rigged with all sorts of mechanical attachments, gave out the half-hours. To Jennifer's hilarity, it played the grand operas, stained-window versions of the action springing into light above the keyboards. "Father's folly," she called it

"Jennifer, if you turn that on, I'll scream!"

"Keep your well-known equilibrium, Jenny. I just wanted to see the fat Brunnehilde, in purple cheeks and corsets, heave in stained glass."

How small they made him these women of his. That organ built in at tremendous expense and effort by tearing out one entire end of the house, was as dear as someone beloved could have been. The storied operas, stalking in strained glass to the pressure of a button peopled his solitude, plunged, in the glory of melody, through his evenings saturating his thirsting spirit Chromoesque tinned music, perhaps, but full of solaces. . .

"Jennifer"

"I'm not! I'm not turning it on. Surely, if father can stand his 'Faust' served up to him like Campbell's soup, you should be able to endure a magenta and majestic trickle of 'Tannhauser

"Do you think Gerkes understood the dinner hour, Rarick?"

"Why, Jenny, what is the matter? The man is not even due for five minutes. I've known you to hold dinner three-quarters of an hour without a whimper when the guests happen to be yours as they almost invariably are

A Cave-In

"She's a cave-in from dieting father."

That was doubtless true It offended him to the point of disgust to see this angular woman responding to a herd instinct that apparently deprived her of logic trying to reduce herself still closer to her skeleton by nibbling at meal-time on a special

Gov. Ely Signs Airport Bill; Mayor to Rush Project

CURLEY PRAISES AMERICAN FOR AIDING FIGHT

Bill Authorizes City to Borrow $1,250,000; to Provide Work for Many

Announcement that Governor Ely had signed the Boston Airport development bill brought a statement from Mayor Curley today congratulating the people of Boston and thanking the Boston Evening American for its aid in securing the legislation.

Mayor Curley said work will be started at the earliest opportunity, and in addition to affording employment for many men, will place Boston in the front rank as regards aviation facilities

FLATS TO BE RECLAIMED

The bill, which became a law with the Governor's signature, authorizes the city to borrow $1,250,000 outside the debt limit for the purpose of developing the airport.

Bird Island Flats will be reclaimed, thereby adding Governor's Island to the present airport, the development covering 1000 acres

Stating that the passage of the bill was most gratifying, the mayor said, in part

"It would have been a breach of good faith had the Legislature failed to act in this manner and would have retarded the completion of the program for the extension and development of the airport as planned by those in charge.

"The contract for the razing of Governors' Island and the reclamation of Bird Island flats will be entered into at the earliest possible date and in addition to affording opportunity for employment to many men, it will place Boston in an exceedingly fortunate position as contrasted with other cities in the matter of aviation facilities.

"The addition of Governors' Island and the reclamation of Bird Island flats to the airport will result in a development covering 1000 acres and extending two and one-half miles into the ocean with a 40-foot channel alongside.

TO INCREASE SHIPMENTS

"Work is progressing upon the East Boston tunnel and provision will shortly be made for the widening of Porter st., East Boston, thus providing a boulevard from the East Boston portal of the tunnel to the airport

"The completion of the tunnel and the widening of Porter st will result in the airport being easier of access than any in the world"

The mayor said there is a reasonable assurance that the Ford Motor Co. will increase the volume of their business in flying trimotored planes to the airport for shipment abroad and concluded

"Boston is indeed to be congratulated and as mayor I desire to express my thanks to the press of Boston and particularly to the Boston Evening American for the valuable assistance given me in the passage of the legislation for the improvement of the airport."

SEDATE WELLESLEY SENIORS DROP CARES OF CLASS FOR MAY DAY JOYS

MISS CATHERINE MITCHILL

TRADITION SAYS SHE'LL BE FIRST BRIDE

Cares of the classroom were forgotten by members of the senior class at Wellesley today for the joys and sport of the annual May Day exercises. The greatest honor of the day fell to Miss Catherine Mitchill of Downingtown, Pa., when she won the annual hoop-rolling contest. Tradition says that the winner will be the first member of the graduating class to wed. Time will answer this. The center picture shows members of the sophomore class forming the senior class numerals on the hill at the college. The picture at the right shows the start of the hoop race. G. Frank Radway, veteran American photographer, who snapped these pictures, rounded out a full quarter of a century of snapping May Day festivities at Wellesley by attending the exercises today. Many of the old grads still recall "Rad" and his ever-ready camera

AXI DRIVERS WIN FIGHT

Veteran taxi cab drivers today won the right to reside outside of Boston when they appeared at a hearing granted by Police Commissioner Eugene C. Hultman.

The commissioner ruled that men already holding drivers' licenses can continue to reside outside the city, but all new applicants must be residents of Boston.

George Callahan of Lexington rolled to the stand by President Frank Seavver of the Checker Taxi Co., turned the scales when he said he had 13 children, one and one-half acres of land and pays only $20 rent.

185 ADMITTED TO THE LAW

The 185 were successful out of more than 700 who took the recent bar examinations.

In two groups they were sworn in with Judge Pierce admonishing them on the duties of their new station in life.

The new women lawyers include Margaret M. Curley of Roslindale, Anna R. Cooper of Dorchester, Margaret R. DeRoma of Walpole, Bessie Bloomberg of Dorchester, Evelyn I. Berman of Roxbury, Florence Ramsey of Cambridge, Mrs. Harold C. B. Thompson of Wellesley, Miss Eva Mitrano of Somerville, Miss Ann R. Cooper of Dorchester, Miss Marjorie I. Public Building Bills Signed by Ely

The compromise public building bills, providing for $2,750,000 to be borrowed on four-year notes, and $500,000 to be provided through an increase in the Bible tax, were signed by Governor Ely last night.

There was a slight skirmish in the House on the enactment stage. Rep. Standish of Stoneham attempting to block final passage of the borrowing bill. He did not get far, however, for on the roll-call only 43 members voted against the bill and 179 voted for it. In the Senate enactment was voted, 32 to 6.

FOUR QUIZZED IN KILEY SLAYING

Three men seized yesterday in a lodging house in Massachusetts ave., South End, and another picked up today were turned over to Somerville police by Capt. John Anderson of Station 5 for questioning regarding the murder last week of James M. Kiley, Somerville filling station attendant.

In the room where the raid was made the police found three loaded guns, which were turned over to Capt. Charles J. Van Amburgh, state firearms expert. It is believed that Capt. Van Amburgh's examination of the weapons led to the surrender of the men to the Somerville authorities.

A fourth man, Joseph Donnellan, alias Selina, and a girl, Gertrude Rogers, 21, were to be arraigned in municipal court this morning as idle and disorderly persons. Another man taken in the raid was released after questioning this morning.

Capt. Thomas A. Damery of the Somerville department said the chief concern of his force this far was to establish the ownership of the guns.

BOYS HELD AS STORE THIEVES

Through the capture of six boys ranging in age from 17 to 20, police headquarters detectives today expressed the belief they had broken up a shoplifting ring.

The boys who are held as suspicious persons, according to the detectives, have been stealing merchandise from downtown stores and returning it later for refunds.

The capture resulted from the recognition of one small boy, who led officers to the gathering place of the others on Washington st.

Fingerprint experts made photographs of several clear prints on the wrecked safe.

WELLESLEY IN MAY DAY FETE

Three hundred Wellesley College seniors rolled their hoops this May day and "Rad" took the picture.

"Rad" is G Frank Radway veteran Boston Evening American news photographer. Today he made his 25th consecutive series of photographs of the traditional race and found himself sharing interest with the fair students, for he was at the "receiving end" of a battery of movie cameras himself.

"Rad" was photographed congratulating the winner, Miss Catherine C. Mitchill of Downington, Pa., and he was photographed receiving congratulations on his 25th hoop-rolling photographing anniversary.

HOOPS TURN LOOPS.

Wearing their academic caps and with their gowns hemmed to knee-length the college seniors pursued their hoops down Tower hill from the court to the chapel steps. In some cases the hoops, performing loops, pursued the seniors.

It is college superstition that the winner of the race will be the first bride of the class, so it is proper, henceforth to refer to Miss Mitchill as a prospective bride.

With the race ended, the seniors lined up on the roadside and the three lower classes, clad in white marched between them to chapel while the seniors tapped their hoops. The sophomores honored the seniors with a figured "1931" against the green of the hill and then the underclassmen "crashed" the seniors for possession of the scarred hoops.

For the first time the event was held on May 1 instead of on the first Saturday in May. For the first time, also, the Maypole frolic with the students in frocks and hair-ribbons was omitted.

"RAD" RECALLS OLD DAYS

There was a small army of news photographers on hand today but it was not always so. "Rad" remembers the days before 1914 when the college frowned on news representatives at the event and he was obliged to make plenty of strategic skirmishes to get his pictures. But he always got them.

"I used to go out there early in the morning and hide in the woods by the lake. The place would be alive with specially sworn-in constables. Always, eventually, I would be discovered but not until I had exposed plates. Some photographers were arrested but I always managed to get out—with an escort of constables—and with my pictures."

DRY LAW POLL IS PLANNED TO HEAL RIFT IN RANKS OF G. O. P.

WETS SHOW UP AT HANNIGAN CONFERENCE

Anti-Saloon League Head and Other Prohibition Supporters Ignore Invitations

By JOHN T. LAMBERT

Maj. Judson Hannigan's effort to close the cleft in the Republican party caused by prohibition today seemed to have had about as much effect as Mrs. Partington's attempt to sweep back the sea with a broom.

A dozen young and hopeful Republicans, some of them still damp behind the ears and few of them bearing the scars of long party service, assembled yesterday at the Old South Building headquarters of the Republican Club in response to the major's invitation to reach a solvent on the troublesome issue which has split the party into sizable, irreconcilable factions.

A prohibition poll will be taken among the active Republicans of the state by the distribution of a questionnaire through the chartered Republican clubs, it was decided at the conference.

Those who attended were not only young and hopeful, but they were decidedly wet in spirit.

DRY LEADER ABSENT

The drys were conspicuously and unanimously missing.

Superintendent Arthur J. Davis of the Anti-Saloon League had received an invitation. But it was a fine afternoon and Mr. Davis went out for a walk—not to the Old South Building conclave.

His efficient secretary confided that it would be useless to ask the sisters of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union if they had attended.

"Don't waste time," she counseled. "The dry organizations got invitations, but one and all of them ignored it.

"If you really want to know, that was a 'wet' meeting."

Lieut.-Gov. Youngman, who will seek the Republican nomination for governor on a platform that will be interpreted as dry whether he likes it or not, was among those who dropped his invitation into a convenient wastebasket.

At the hour of the young hopefuls' conclave he was dining a group of business men at the Parker House.

TAYLOR PRESENT

The roll of those who received invitations, but who passed up the meeting for one cause or another, included all the Republican ex-governors and most of the active G. O. P. officeholders, present, prospective and ambitious.

Chairman Amos L. Taylor of the Republican state committee graced the private conference with his sturdy form, if Republican National Committeeman Louis K. Liggett did not.

Among others seen there were Samuel Prine of the Young Men's Republican Club of Springfield, where Congressman "Billy" Grandfield won two notable victories on a ripping wet program; President Fred Allen and S. Howard Donnell of the Essex County Republican Club and City Councillor Lawrence Curtis.

Two women were known to have been present. One of them was Mrs. Frank C. Scanlan, representing an organization of women opposed to prohibition, and the other of whom was said to be Miss Katharine Parker, president of the Woman's Republican Club.

Major Hannigan was said to be reading today with quiet satisfaction the statement made to President Hoover by Congressman Treadway yesterday on the difficulties of the Republican party in Massachusetts.

CITY OBSERVES ANNIVERSARY IN MAY DAY FETE

Flags Are Flown on All Public Buildings in Honor of the 109th Birthday of City

A May Pole dance and May Day Fete at the Frog Pond on the Common with display of the city flag on public buildings, marked Boston's observance of its 109th anniversary as a city today.

In response to a proclamation issued by Mayor Curley special observances were held in the schools, but there was no official celebration of the event.

The festivities at the Frog Pond took place at 11 o'clock under the supervision of the Community Service of Boston, with about 250 primary school children participating.

Parochial school children who took part were from schools of St. Anthony's Church, St. John's Church and the North End Settlement House.

Music was furnished by the band of the House of the Angel Guardian which volunteered its services. The dance and fete lasted an hour.

By order of the mayor the city flag was displayed on all public buildings along with Old Glory.

Boston's first city government was organized 109 years ago and Mayor Curley pointed out the intervening period marks wonderful material expansion, commercial development, human increase and spiritual growth.

He asked that the keynote of the celebration be loyalty to America and Boston.

WIFE SAYS SHE WAS DRUGGED

Ross Weiner Cushing of Lynn, who seeks nullity of her marriage to Ernest L. Cushing on the grounds that she was drugged before the ceremony, was very much in love with Cushing long after the marriage, witnesses testified in Salem probate court today.

Through her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Weiner of Lynn the girl charged she was duped into marriage by Cushing, a Lynn war veteran, and Maude Burke who she claimed gave her something to drink that made her dizzy.

Pearl Corcoran, 14, and Rose Savery, 15, Lynn schoolgirls, testified they met the young bride at a party on the wedding night and she told them Mr. and Mrs. Weiner were trying to keep the bride from her husband.

Both said the Weiner girl was with her husband and appeared happy.

Helen Osgood, probation officer of Lynn, told the court the bride expressed love of her husband and Policewoman Anna B. Mangan told of a complaint of Cushing that the parents of his bride were keeping her from him.

After Cushing admitted he had served a term for criminal assault three years ago, the testimony was concluded and lawyers' arguments will be held Thursday.

SHIRLEY GREY, NEWCOMER TO SCREEN, GIVEN LEADING ROLE

Beauty to Play Opposite Richard Dix in "The Reckoner" Film

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS
Universal Service Motion Picture Editor
Copyright, 1931, by National Service, Inc.

LOS ANGELES, May 1.—You can never tell, if you are a young and pretty girl, when a producer's eye is on you. Shirley Grey, 22 years old, was playing in stock in Oakland. Samuel Goldwyn heard about her and invited her to come and make a test.

Luella O. Parsons

Miss Grey flew down to Hollywood one day when she didn't have a matinee and had several tests made, with the result that she was put under contract by Mr. Goldwyn.

Richard Dix and J. Walter Rubens, in search for a leading lady for "The Reckoning," took a look at this same Miss Grey and decided she was the one. She was immediately borrowed to play opposite Mr. Dix, and those who have seen her say she is a real beauty.

Now all the other comely young girls in stock are waiting to be chosen.

NEVER SINCE I have known Harold Lloyd has he ever bought a published story. He is great on originals and on giving the boys who work for him a chance to write his comedy. But he has found "Beau Peep," a magazine story by Richard Connell, that suits him down to the ground and Harold has bought it. John Murphy, his business manager, read it in New York and immediately sent it to Harold to read. It is the story of an American boy in the Foreign Legion. Harold's henchmen are adding a romance.

This means the Al Boasberg story will be postponed. Harold is getting better every day and recovering nicely from his appendicitis, as for Harold, Jr., well, that boy will soon be going to theaters and taking girls; he is growing so fast.

I NEVER hear of Louis Calhern without remembering the story told on Ilka Chase. Miss Chase was Mrs. Calhern No. 1 She divorced the handsome actor and he in turn married Julia Hoyt, famous society woman, actress and writer. When Miss Chase learned that her erstwhile Romeo had married Julia Hoyt she sent her visiting card marked "Mrs. Louis Calhern" with a note saying "I hope this will reach you in time." It probably did, for Mr. Calhern is still married to Julia Hoyt and from last reports they are making go of it. Mr. Calhern has just been signed by First National to play one of the leads in "Correspondent."

JUNIOR LAEMMLE, having reached the age of 33, has been made second vice-president of Universal. He used to be general manager. Well, from the way Junior is going he will probably own the entire business in another five years. Here are a few pictures he has made, "All Quiet on the Western Front," "The King of Jazz," "A Lady Surrenders," "Seed." Keep your eye on Junior. Even if he was born into the movies he is going to prove that he is all right.

WHETHER "RABBITT" and "Mr. Average Man" are as closely related as Sinclair Lewis would have us believe, remains to be seen. RKO-Pathe believes that the daily happenings in the life of the ordinary citizen will furnish enough comedy for a series of short subjects. They have signed Ernst Kenedy, who has appeared in innumerable Laurel and Hardy comedies, to play the lead in "Mr. Average Man," with Harry Sweet directing. The first of the series, "Lemon Meringue" starts this week and included in the cast with Mr. Kennedy are Dot Farley, Florence Lake and William Eugene.

THE LAST I heard of Bud De Sylva, he and his wife were doing Paris in great style; but all things must end, even vacations. Bud De Sylva arrives in two weeks to take up his duties as associate producer. His first will be a story written by himself, called "Angel Face." Both Mr. De Sylva and "Angel Face" belong to Fox and the picture will have no less a star than Janet Gaynor.

THINGS YOU may want to hear. Lois Cheaver, who played the second lead in "Everything's Rosy" at Radio Pictures, has a new five-year contract. Her next is a Woolsey picture and from all I can hear this vivacious, attractive young woman is headed for bigger and better roles. While I am on the subject of Radio Pictures, "Love a La Carte" as just been purchased from John Hayward Lawson.

HERE IS a new one even in Hollywood where there is nothing new under the sun. Al Boasberg, comedy writer and Ben Markson, another scribe, threw a reading party at Boasberg's Malibu Beach house. The guests who arrived had to listen to their wrestling comedy called "Catch-as-Catch-Can," whether they wanted to or not. Once in the house or on the sand there wasn't a chance of anyone getting away. Both Boasberg and Markson read and read and read. Among those who listened were Jack Oakie, Lew Ayres, Con Conrad, Lola Lane, Frances McCoy, Ricardo Cortez, William McGill.

o-morrow heading the stage bill. Miss Sweet has not deserted the pictures, but for a short period will confine her artistic attention to personal appearances. Meeting her friends face to face over the footlights is not a case of a cheery how-do-you-do, for Miss Sweet takes vaudeville very seriously. She believes that the public want to see her do something, and so when she decided upon a tour, her first consideration was a vehicle.

The public has an opportunity to see the star of "Show Girl of Hollywood" and "The Silver Lorde," and at the same time see a little comedy.

Tallulah Bankhead Makes Film Debut in "Tarnished Lady"

By HARLEIGH SCHULTZ

The Metropolitan for its new week has Tallulah Bankhead making her screen bow in "Tarnished Lady"; and on stage has a very brisk revue, "Paradise Isle," which easily outpaces the feature photoplay in entertainment value. Among others the footlights shine upon the beaming countenances of that agile and capable pair, Buck and Bubbles, of Ziegfeld and Lew Leslie "Blackbirds" reputation.

Tallulah Bankhead could get along very well indeed without "Tarnished Lady," but Tallulah Bankhead would die of inanition and malnutrition without the saving grace of Tallulah Bankhead. For this movie debutants not only has an intriguing personality, but most curiously suggestive of Jeanne Eagels, with occasional hints of Ina Claire and Joan Crawford, but she is undoubtedly a lady of talent, probably destined to a high place in the films.

Tallulah Bankhead

The story, very pallid and at no moment beyond the observer's power to tell what is going to happen casts Miss Bankhead as a society lass. Deep in debt, she passes up her poor lover to wed Clive Brook, millionaire broker. She buckles with him on the very day his fortune go blooey in a market crash. Then, alas! she discovers her afforetime sweetheart has experienced a change of face, goes to work, gives him to wife, and so on and on until the inevitable reconciliation with Mr. Brook.

The direction is but moderately good, the photography is excellent, dialogue is poor, and the picture is best in its silent sweeps. Like the star, Mr. Brook has a most unsympathetic part, on the basis that can be said of him is that he is among those present. Cromwell is almost wholly wasted, Lilyan Tashman as the mother gets a few laughs.

Buck and Bubbles top the list of high-class hoofing funmakers in the show. These colored entertainers, clear in quality, they are, ought by Robin & Hood Hall. Duncan and the Evans Boys complete with Jimmy Eldard as master of ceremonies.

She received her first practical experience in a small role in the musical comedy "Funny Face." After appearances in a number of other musical shows and several Theatre Guild productions, she was signed to a picture contract by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer and made her first appearance on the screen in "Devil-May-Care." Later vehicles were "In Gay Madrid" "Call of the Flesh."

COURT ASKED TO HALT SHARKEY-CARNERA BOUT

FANNING

—By GEORGE UNDERWOOD—

"On Marathon Trail." ↕ Covered on Horseback.
It Awakened Echoes. ↕ Written Standing Up.
Carvajal Impressed. ↕ Dick Baldwin Writes.

CUBAN RAN ON MEAL OF GREEN APPLES

MARATHON ECHOES. Twin echoes from "Along the Marathon Trail," which appeared in the Boston Evening American recently. Felix Carvajal, that little Cuban of the flaming heart, whose race in the Olympic Marathon of 1904 was a sporting epic, inspired both echoes. First echo comes from the Quequechan Club of Fall River, Mass., where Dick Baldwin, now a prominent Connecticut executive, writes of his impressions of Carvajal's great race as he himself saw it when covering it as a reporter for the St. Louis Star. The other echo comes from far away Havana. It is from Senor Joe Massaguer, editor of El Mundo, Havana's biggest newspaper, and Carvajal himself.

Accompanying the good Senor Massaguer's letter is a copy of El Mundo with a big three column photo of Massaguer reading the Boston Evening American's Marathon story to Carvajal and two columns of type reprinting excerpts of the yarn. Charlie Schmidt's great drawings which illustrated the tale all are shown up prominently.

IN HIS letter Massaguer, among other things, says:

"Carvajal almost cried with joy when I read him the thrilling account of his famous struggle in the Boston Evening American. He was overcome to think that after so many, many years Americans would remember him. He asked me to tell you that he doesn't wear his flamboyant mustache any more, but despite his 52 years, like Johnny Walker, still is going strong.

JOE MASSAGUER AND CARVAJAL

"Sure enough he is. Last year he ran from one end of the island to the other. He started at Guane in the Pinar del Rio Province on January 1 and arrived at Santiago de Cuba, the home of the good old Bacardi rum, on September 23. He not only covered the entire length of the Central Highway but all detours and made stops in towns, rurale guard posts, sugar mills, etc. He pushed a little car built like an automobile, painted with advertising signs, to cover his expenses, and carried a letter from the chief of the army, Gen. Herrera, requesting all army posts to give him shelter, meals and protection. During that long trip Carvajal wore out 45 pairs of shoes.

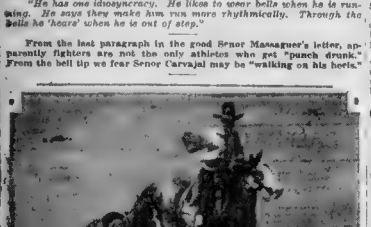
"Now he wants me to go out and follow him in an automobile while he runs 26 miles 385 yards in good Marathon time, just to show the world that he still is something of a runner. You certainly started something, as you Yankees say."

"You see, Carvajal depends on his running reputation and ability for his livelihood. During the last three or four carnivals he made money by running in front of the float advertising the Tropical Brewery, the same firm that recently brought the Brooklyn Dodgers to Cuba. He is trying to secure financial backing for a transcontinental run from New York to San Francisco.

"When Carvajal isn't running he stays on his chicken farm in Marianao, out near the race track. Everyone knows him and he is very popular. Felix never married, lives alone, now neither smokes nor drinks and always is in great shape.

"He has one idiosyncracy. He likes to wear bells when he is running. He says they make him run more rhythmically. Through the bells he 'hears' when he is out of step."

From the last paragraph in the good Senor Massaguer's letter, apparently fighters are not the only athletes who get "punch drunk." From the bell tip we fear Senor Carvajal may be "walking on his heels."



HOW ONE MARATHON WAS COVERED

NOW FOR Dick Baldwin's letter. Tune in:

"Your 'Along Marathon Trail' was of unusual interest to me, as it took me back thru Memory Lane. I 'covered' the Olympic Marathon of 1904 for the St. Louis Star, being its athletic editor at that time. Harry W. Lanigan, the sporting editor, arranged with the 101 Ranch Wild West Show to have ponies from the show stationed every four miles en route. On these ponies I rode backward and forward telephoning in to the Star the progress of the race.

"Not having been on a horse for many, many years, I wrote the story 'standing up' when I got back to the office.

"All the St. Louis papers, as you probably recall, gave Carvajal a big play, as he was one of the most colorful athletes in that motley pack. I was reporting his progress every two miles. Along about the 24th mile I 'lost' him completely. No one seemed to know what had happened to him. Knowing Lanigan's yen for details, I forgot the other runners and went on a hunt for Carvajal. Where do you suppose I found Flying Felix?

"Down a small lane leading from the course I noticed two men throwing sticks up at an apple tree—knocking off green apples. I rode up to them to ask them if they had seen anything of the vanished Felix. Imagine my surprise when one of them turned around with a grin, flashing his teeth from behind that flowing mustache. Yes, it was Felix himself.

"The other fellow was Sidney Hatch, the Chicago distancer. You probably recall him as you ran against him in the four-mile team race that wound up the games. That was his first Marathon. He had been a delivery boy for a milk route along the Boule Mich.

"But imagine those two Marathoners stopping and filling up on green apples. The heat alone was enough to kill them. If you recall, it was about 106 in the shade, one of the hottest days Missouri ever experienced. My horses were in a continual lather. I heeded Carvajal and Hatch back on the Marathon trail and that darned little Cuban, with his belly full of green apples, came in third!"

IF GRA'MA COULD SEE HER NOW!

RHYTHM IN THE HURDLES

In Grandma's day a girl who jumped fences was a tom-boy. And if anyone saw her ankle she would blush like a rose. The modern girl certainly is on the wing. Maybe she's all the better for it physically as well as mentally. These Australian girl hurdlers hope to meet their American sisters in next year's Olympics. They'll have to fly high and move fast to beat Miss America. (International Newsreel photo.)

Garden Says Carnera Can't Fight Sharkey

New York, May 1 (US)—Long-threatened legal warfare over the services of Primo Carnera, giant Italian boxer, materialized when the Madison Square Garden Corporation of Illinois applied to federal court for an injunction against Carnera's bout with Jack Sharkey.

William B. Sachs, of the firm of Chadbourne, Stanchfield & Levy, attorneys for the Garden, was the complainant. He was described in the application as the president of the Illinois subsidiary.

Sachs asked that Carnera be restrained from boxing Sharkey for the Dodger A. C., at Ebbets Field on June 10, on the ground that the Garden holds a prior contract with Carnera by which he agrees to a September match with the winner of the coming championship bout between Max Schmeling and Young Stribling.

The complaint alleged that a Sharkey-Carnera bout would be a counter-attraction to Schmeling and Stribling, and that it would lessen the value of the title match. Sachs estimated that the Garden would draw $600,000 with Schmeling and Stribling, and a similar sum with Carnera and the winner.

Carnera Contract Bars Bout With Sharkey

In Carnera's contract with the Garden, which was filed, it was stipulated that the Italian Samson would not box Sharkey, Max Baer, Victorio Campolo, George Godfrey or other major opponents before his September bout for the Garden.

Carnera was described as "a boxer of world-wide reputation, and a leading contender for the championship."

Old Colony to Hold Races Tomorrow

Weymouth May 1—The management of the Old Colony Driving Club of this town has made all arrangements for the opening of the matinee racing season at the South Weymouth track Saturday afternoon.

The track has been resurfaced and repairs have been made at the stable. Never since the club has been organized have there been so many trainers with horses as this year. Every space is taken by some of the best-known drivers in the state.

In addition to local drivers .6 horses new members include Andrew Jameson with a string of 10 horses. Five more are here from Middleboro. Horace Cameron, the well-known driver, has five trotters and pacers, and Chester Stewart of Readville, with three trotters, has been here for awhile.

BOBBY SHOWS HOW IN MOVIES

New York, May 1 (AP)—Go to the movies and take a few strokes at your golf score.

That is the theory of the "talkie" entitled "How I Play Golf," which has the one and only Bobby Jones as its star. But so far the hopeful duffers haven't had a chance to try it out.

Bobby and "Calamity Jane," his famous putter, appeared yesterday in a preview of the first of his 12 short pictures which aim to show the duffers how the world's champion plays.

Bobby explained and demonstrated his method of putting, with Frank Craven playing the "Duffer."

"The important thing in putting," he said, "is to get an easy stance, with the feet pretty close together and a smooth swing to the stroke for distance putting.

"I change my grip in putting, not using the overlapping grip I employ with all other shots. I keep the thumbs on a line against the shaft. It helps my control. In swinging the putter back I run the last three fingers of the left hand. Too much use of the right hand here tends to lift the club and produce a choppier, less effective stroke."

Then Jones illustrated by sinking a long putt.

FERRANTE ONLY BOSTON VICTOR IN NATIONALS

By DAMON RUNYON

New York, May 1 (US) — The Lone Wolf of Nevada, Tony Poloni, who is a dead ringer for Jack Dempsey when Jack needed ham-and, pounded his way through the National Boxing Championships of the A. A. U., to win the 175-pound title by a knockout over tough Joe Meham, of Kansas City.

It was the best fight of the finals that decided eight national amateur titles, in the Madison Square Garden. Meham, bigbesked, squat-built, and rugged stuck it out with the scowling, less-flanked Nevadian for two full rounds, only to fall sprawling, open-mouthed and gasping under Poloni's whistling right in the third.

The first of the national finals brought on Babe Triscaro of Cleveland, and Eddy Cerasole, of Oakland, Cal.

The decision went to Triscaro, and Martin A. Klein of the Metropolitan Association climbed into the ring and handed Babe his championship trophy, a gold belt buckle with the A. A. U. medal set in enamel.

Mike Belluse, of New York, and Joseph Ferrante, of Boston, were next, fighting for the 118-pound, or bantamweight, championship.

It wasn't much of a fight until the third and there was plenty of tugging in that round, too. Not many clean punches were landed on either side, but they did so much bouncing around that it looked good to the crowd. Ferrante got the decision.

Tony Scarpati, of New York, and Don Gonzales, of Cleveland, fought for the 126-pound, or featherweight title. Gonzales is a southpaw. He drove Scarpati to the ropes in the first round and pegged away at his stomach, but Scarpati finally met him rushing in with a right to the chin.

In the second round, Gonzales was warned three times for hitting low, and then disqualified Scarpati winning the title on a foul.

Al Gomez of San Francisco and Steve Salek of Boston were the 135-pound, or lightweight finalists. In the second round, Gomez took the body punching play right away from Salek, and drove him through the ropes with his smashes. Gomez nailed Salek so hard in the stomach with one smash to the body that the Californian himself fell through the ropes from the recoil.

DEMPSEY MAKES CARROLL OFFER

Boston, May 1 (AP)—Dan Carroll boxing promoter, today said he received a telegram from Jack Dempsey proposing a heavyweight match at Reno, Nev., on July 4 between Jimmy Maloney of Boston and Max Baer of California. Carroll said he was agreeable to the match.

Dempsey's telegram was sent from Reno where the former heavyweight champion went recently, presumably considering a divorce action. The telegram was the first intimation that Dempsey had planned to promote boxing in Reno.

Hadley Now One of Best Hurlers in League

Yet, today, the Shoe City boy is regarded as one of the most effective hurlers in the majors while all three of his schoolboy pitching mates are now engaged in other occupations.

It's too bad, from a ... point, that Hadley didn't become more famous as a flinger ... If he had, one of the Boston clubs might have had the ... chance to grab him.

As it happened, "Bump" ... upon being graduated in ... began playing semi-pro ball ... Again he failed to get the ... afire as a pitcher, and when in the fall of that year he went to Pennsylvania to enter Mercer ... Academy, little did anyone think that he was starting on the ... to big league fame

Yet such was case

He attracted the ... attention of Washington scouts by ... performances in the Keystone ... prep school, and after ... continuing ... good work with Walter Schuster's East Douglas team, the same outfit that sent Wes ... to Maryland's wonder pitcher, up to the big show, he was signed by the Senators and farmed out to Birmingham in 1926

Fourteen wins in 21 starts in the Southern League caused the front office to recall him the following year and he has been one of their pitching mainstays ever since

Hadley Won 14, Lost 6 in First Year Up

His very first season in fast company he won fourteen and lost six and his reputation was made.

He didn't do as well in his second year, winning twelve and losing thirteen and in 1928 he went along with the rest of the team, losing sixteen and only winning six.

Manager Walter Johnson of the Senators, in his prime the greatest of all pitchers, is loud in his praise of the Lynn boy.

"Hadley is one of my best pitchers," says Big Barney. "He has one of the best fast balls I have ever looked at, a fine assortment of stuff and very good control. Furthermore, he can help himself a lot both at the bat and afield.

"He is a great pitcher right now and ought to become a greater one. He is only 28 years old and improving all the time.

"If you doubt me, watch him when he faces the Red Sox. He will pitch this afternoon, or in one of the games of the doubleheader tomorrow."

Strange ... that incidentally he was so christened for no good reason by John "Bucky" Flynn, now ... editor on this paper, at the time a prominent Lynn attorney, is married to a Lynn girl, Miss Jess... Gibbs, and still makes his home in that city when he is not pinch hitting ball.

Sox and Senators in Twin Bill Tomorrow

As Shoe City fans, at least, need no urging to turn out in force to watch their favorite athletic son perform.

Yes, fans, that remark about the doubleheader tomorrow is O. K.

It's unusual to stage a twin bill so early in the season, but the Sox suffered their fifth straight postponement yesterday, so Bob Quinn decided that if his charges were to escape playing two games daily throughout the summer he would have to do something about it in a hurry, so he slated two tilts for the week-end

Today be Ladies' Day at the Fens and the fair sex will be admitted free to a single contest between the Sox and Senators, providing that the, the weather permits the opening of the gates for the first time since last Saturday.

TRIBE, GIANTS IN 2D TILT

New York, May 1—The Braves this afternoon attempt to even things in the present series with the Giants here after dropping the initial fray of the Gotham sessions to the Giants by a 2 to 1 count.

Wee Willie Sherdel of the Braves and Bill Walker of the Giants, a couple of effective left-handers, will start this afternoon on the mound. While Sherdel figures to be good against the Giants, Bill McKechnie of the Tribe today will pin his hopes on the hitting of Earl Sheeley, Wally Berger and Red Worthington, a trio of hard-hitting right-handed batters who may blast the Giant hurler from the hill.

Worthington may become the left fielder needed by the Tribe. He played this position in the first game with the Giants, and while not quite as sure in going after balls as he is in right field, his usual haunt, he has the stuff and should improve. Red isn't very fast afoot, but his ability to start with the ball, and play the proper sector of the pasture for the man at bat, make up for lack of speed.

Lefty Tom Zachary pitched a fine game against the Giants in the opener and deserved a better fate. His control was great for he issued only one pass. Fred Fitzsimmons of the Giants, however, allowed the Tribe only two hits, and in addition sent both of the Giants' two runs across the plate with a double and a single. It is hard to beat that kind of mound and bat work.

Jamaica Handicaps

By ED CURLEY

Not much of glamour to the races at Jamaica this afternoon, but there are plenty of horses running and that means something.

The Musketeer, a condition affair, is the main event, and it brings out a classy field of sprinters. A la Carte, which appears to have found his speed, should win. He has former stable companion, On Tap, to beat, but should do so. Milkman is a nifty sprinter and looks good for part of the money

SECOND RACE—Three-year-olds and upward, six furlongs.

Horse	Wt	Jockey	Fr. Odds
A la Carte	110	Laicon	4-5
On Tap	115	Acosta	5-1

Sir Jeroen	118	Wallis	15-1
Expel	110	Pollard	30-1

In the opening event juvenile non-winners will battle. Run On, which ran a good race in one of his starts, looks to have the speed of the field, Jane Mc figures to be the contender. Uncovered has run good enough to break into the money.

FIRST RACE—Two-year-olds, maidens; five furlongs.

Garlic is the best of the field in the third, and looks the probable winner. He will improve over past performances and should win handily. Crushed Stone, which finished second to Sun Friar in his last outing, should take the place. Sun Forward should improve enough to break into the money.

Diamond Dust

By JOE CASHMAN

Fred Fitzsimmons, Giants' burly right-hander who throws that ball up out of nowhere, is certainly an enigma to our Braves.

He pinned the first defeat of the season on them at the Wigwam and came right back at the Polo Grounds yesterday to whip them again, 2 to 1.

He allowed six hits and two runs here. Over there he permitted only two singles and one unearned marker.

And in both games he proved as great a hitter as a pitcher. In the local game he made three singles, knocked in a run and scored twice. Yesterday he made a double and a single, scored the tying run and knocked in the winning run.

He'd be out of luck if he ever sought any favors in this town.

Tom Zachary, who started for the Tribe, allowed 10 hits in seven innings, yet he would have escaped his first defeat of the campaign if he could have silenced Fitzsimmons' bat

The Giants' victory enabled them to pass the Warriors in the standing but with Ed Brandt, always a puzzle to the McGrawmen primed to pitch in the second game, this afternoon, the natives stand a fine chance of regaining their position as runners-up to the Cards and Cubs, who are still tied for the lead.

The Red Sox gained something by remaining idle for five successive afternoons. The Browns took it on the chin again yesterday and the Fenway flock climbed up over them into seventh place. Let's hope they keep right on going up.

Bill Carrigan's judgment of ball players has again been vindicated. Harold "Whitey" Wilts, little southpaw who was slashed from the Fenway roster by the Lewiston squire, was brought back to the big show by the Phils this spring on the strength of his 20-odd victories in the Texas League last season, but now the announcement is made that he has been sent back to the American Association.

Bill Rogell, another of Carrigan's cast-offs, was purchased at a big price by the Tigers last year and it was predicted that he would prove the great shortstop the Detroit entry had been looking for in vain for many years. The former Sox pilot said that Rogell wouldn't do. He was right. The player was back in the minors before the season was half over.

Carrigan got nowhere with the Sox, but he can never be charged with having made many mistakes as boss of the club.

HARVARD OUT FOR TRACK CROWN

By BILL CONNELL

Harvard freshmen and varsity track athletes this afternoon start their drive to collect the titles in the second annual Greater Boston intercollegiate track and field games at the Harvard Stadium.

Harvard has 133 athletes in the meet, almost twice as many as the second strongest team, in numbers, which is M. I. T. with 82 entries.

The victory margin of Harvard in the meeting may be proportionate to the numerical advantage which the Crimson enjoys. Strength in the running events is supported by field event performers who should win many points for Harvard in the two days' struggle.

The Crimson has two intercollegiate champions entered, Oscar Guttermeister in the pole vault and Gene Record in the 120 yards high hurdles. Both these athletes are top heavy favorites to win in their specialties.

The games open today with the trials of the freshman 120-yard high hurdles, Johnny Hayes of Harvard is the choice in this event. The varsity high hurdles trials follow the freshman event, Gene Record of Harvard and Frank Powers of Northeastern are the pick of the field in the varsity race.

Plenty of Competition in Century Dash

Trials of the varsity 100 follow, Tom O'Brien of B. C., Lin Pattee of B. U., Jim Fait of Northeastern, Uanna of Tufts, Dodge, Hawes and Watkins of Harvard, and Lappin and Hall of M. I. T. are strong in the century.

Dana Smith of B. C., former Brookline high and R. A. A. runner, will make a strong bid in his heat of the fifth race, the freshmen 440 trial. In the varsity quarter Don Fleet of B. C., Bernhardt of B. U., Shea of Northeastern, Kollmeyer, Dodge and Munroe of Harvard, Hall and Jewett of Tech are the best, with Fleet the selection.

Barrie, Cobb, winner last year, Estes, Fobes, Pearson and Wesley of Harvard, Leadbetter of Tech, McCrudden of Northeastern, Carow, Jordan and O'Brien of B. C., all are better than two-minute men in the varsity half.

In the varsity 220 Pattes of B. U., Shea of Northeastern, Uanna of Tufts, Dodge, Hawes and Watkins of Harvard, Lappin and Hall of M. I. T., are fast

The two American horses in the race, John Hay (Jock) Whitney's Kings Woman, and Mrs. Corlette Glorney's Carola failed to place.

Revere Girl Plans Boston Light Swim

Rosiya Better of Revere, one of the promising young aquatic stars of Greater Boston, celebrated her 18th birthday Thursday by taking her first dip of the season at Revere Beach. Miss Better plans to swim to Boston Light this summer. She will train for the long grind by swimming from Nahant to Revere.

Memorial Crushed by Jamaica, 10 to 6

Jamaica Plain high opened its season by blasting Memorial high, 16 to 6, yesterday at the Carolina ave. grounds, Jamaica Plain.

DI GLANE AND LUTZE IN DRAW

By JACK CONWAY

The Count's head crashed against the floor of the ring with terrific force. George's full weight of 220 pounds was behind the smash which was delivered after 1h 36m. 29s. of stirring wrestling.

Jack Conway

Zarynoff went out of the picture when his head hit the floor of the ring. The sound of the impact could be heard 20 feet from the ring.

It was fully five minutes before the Count cleared sufficiently to enable him to start for his corner. He collapsed after staggering to his feet and was then assisted from the ring.

In view of the fact the men were wrestling under championship rules, which call for all contests that last for more an hour and half to be decided by one fall, the George knockout gave him the victory.

It was another case of youth, strength and terrific driving power overcoming skill, speed and a knowledge of the fine points of the mat game.

George looked the part of a champion as he came from behind to win. He was a true representative of Fleming Youth as he forced the issue at every opportunity in his effort to tire out his faster and more scientific opponent.

It was a Zarynoff crowd. The 6000 fans who witnessed the action wanted to see the Count win. The fans booed when George would retreat under the ropes when hard pressed, and then break forth into cheers when the colorful Count gained an advantage.

Count Bothers George With Toe Holds

Early in the tussle, the Count gave George considerable trouble with toe holds. George always got out of harm's way by retreating under the ropes.

The Count proved very efficient when applying arm locks. He dropped George with this hold several times. Zarynoff varied his attack by calling into play leg locks and heel locks.

Meanwhile George kept roughing the Count up at every opportunity. He punished him around the body, and at times rocked him with savage butts.

George let drive with vicious strikes which dropped the Count, but the latter was always able to wriggle over on his stomach and avoid being pinned.

Just before the finish the Count scored with a couple of headlocks. He was pressing his advantage when George locked him with a double arm lock and then tossed him with the reverse back fall.

Lutze and Di Glane in 45-Minute Draw

Nick Lutze of Southern California and Henry Di Glane, French heavyweight, battled for 45 minutes to a draw. DiGlane had the better of the milling in the early stages of the contest, but Lutze made a fast finish and evened up the score.

Al Morelli, Boston College star, continued his triumphant march when he tossed Alex Anderson in 3 minutes, 40 seconds, with a flying tackle.

Lan Macaluso, former Colgate football hero, made his bow as a wrestler by defeating Sailor Arnold of Newport in 6 minutes, 17 seconds. A flying tackle [illegible] for Macaluso.

Jake Patterson of Syracuse and Aba Kaplan of New York battled 10 minutes to a draw.

Pat McKay, Irish heavyweight, and Morelli have been signed to meet in the feature bout at the Arena on next Thursday night.

Denver Boxer Wins Over Rosenbloom

Denver, Colo., April 30 (AP)—George Manley, Denver light heavyweight, tonight won a decision over Maxie Rosenbloom light heavyweight champion, in a 10-round non-title bout.

George Wins as Jack Conway Predicted

Jack Conway's dope almost toppled a couple of times, but Ed George finally crashed through with a victory over Count Zarynoff in their wrestling bout at the Arena.

The Lutze-Di Glane match went to a draw, and so Jack didn't either increase or lose percentage on this match. He had picked Lutze to win.

COUNT TRIES TO WRENCH TITLE

GEORGE SUFFERS FROM FOOT TROUBLE

An Amateur Boxer Writes Home

By DAMON RUNYON

Copyright, 1931, by Universal Service, Inc

(From a contestant in the National Amateur Championships at Madison Square Garden to His Parent.)

New York City, May 1, 1931.

Dear Pop—

You know Pop I been thinking it over since coming to N. Y. and I don't care now no matter if Jack Dempsey and Gene Tunney did make a million dollars and marry actresses and hairesses and all that business like I was always reading about because I can see where fighting is a tough business like you said.

I can see where it is liberlin get a boy in bad habits like staying up late especially on national holiday meant like I am in as I sit up until after 12 o'clock waiting to go on in the ring but you can tell mom not to worry as I did not do any running around like she told me not to. I just set.

You tell mom and sis I didn't get a chance yet to see what the ladies are wearing in N. Y. because I set all the time in the dressing room and they do not allow ladies in the dressing room. You tell mom I remembered to wash my neck about being careful of my health and I would have went to bed early only I had to set up waiting to go on but maybe I would have felt better if I had got more exercise. You know pop I like to sleep quite a lot because a growing boy like me needs sleep.

You tell sis N. Y. is a nice city but I have not seen Fifth Avenue like she told me to on account of having to set in the dressing room I seen Broadway and it has a chop suey joint upstairs just like old Hong's place on Fifty st. but I did not go in it.

I did not go anywhere pop except to the Garden which is a very big place and you tell sis I did not get a chance to see Peggy Joyce like she told me because all the time I was setting in the dressing room.

Pop the Garden is an awful big place but I was not scared like you told me not to be and I remembered to keep my left hand out all the time just like you said and in keep my right in front of my chin. But they give me a big tough colored man to fight and I was all tired out from setting in the dressing room so long and besides I was not feeling so good because I got hungry and ate a few peanuts and drank a bottle of coke, I guess maybe I should not have drank the coke because you know my stomach upsets easy.

But this was a big tough colored man pop and he come from Pittsburgh and he was awful black and he was awful mean and I think he weighed a whole lot more than me. I think he had some kind of pull with the man who weighed us and got the man to say he did not weigh any more than me because you know, pop everybody is very tricky in N. Y. like you said.

But I remembered to keep my left hand out all the time and to keep my right hand in front of my chin like you said, and I just sailed into old mister colored man like I sail into the boys around the Y back home.

But pop you never saw such a big tough colored man, and right away he hit me in the stomach where I had the peanuts and the coke and made me feel bad. We got in a clinch and the referee knocked my hands down and said stop holding and when my hands were down the big, tough colored man hit me on the chin.

Pop I think maybe the referee was a friend of his because he did not treat me right in knocking my hands down so I was helpless and let the big, tough colored man hit me on the chin.

The crowd was hollering kill him, and I thought they meant for me to kill the colored man and I wish I could have done it pop, but afterwards another boy told me they were hollering for the colored man to kill me because they did not like the pink pants sis made me.

You tell sis I told her all the time those pants would make me look like a sissy and get me in trouble. The big tough colored man wore white pants and that is the kind of pants sis should have made me instead of pink especially with a green ribbon for a belt. Fighting is a serious business Pop and is not for pink pants and things girls like.

When the colored man hit me on the chin I went down to take a count but right away the referee grabbed me under the arms and pulled me over to my corner which shows you how he liked the colored man Pop or he would have let me get up and lick him but they are certainly tricky here like you said.

The next day the papers said only the big tough colored man knocked me out with one punch but I felt more than one punch Pop so you can see how the papers in here just like they do back home and anyway I was not out I was only taking a count.

So I am out of the tournament Pop and I only got in just once after all that setting up but I do not care because I can see where you are right and it is no business for respectable boys so when I come home I will go back to work at the drug store and stop worrying about fighting no matter how much money Jack Dempsey and Gene Tunney made.

You tell Mom I am all right and am find and dandy except one eye is a little black and my nose is bent but it will straighten out and I will be as good as new.

You tell Mom and Sis I will try and find out what the ladies are wearing in New York as soon as I get some sleep and I am sorry I will not be able to bring you back a belt buckle like they are giving for first prize Pop but belt buckles are not everything in life are they Pop?

I think maybe if I had not drank the coke the first punch would not made me sick, but if ever I wear those pink pants Sis made me again you can say I am an awful big fool Pop.

Your loving son,
ALFRED.

Aurora Race Track Opens Up Today

Chicago, May 1 (AP)—Chicago went back to the horse races today with Aurora's refurbished track as the scene of another long, rich season.

With good weather, a record attendance was expected largely due to the fact that the (haircut) season is ladies' day. For the feature event, the 3½ furlongs inaugural handicap, the Peabody entry, T. S. Jordan and Tombereau, was favored, with Princeton and Gold Step getting plenty of support.

The new $75,000 clubhouse was finished yesterday. The meeting will continue for 20 days.

TRIANGULAR REGATTA TOMORROW

Twelve complete crews of Technology, Princeton and Harvard oarsmen will hold final workouts on the Charles river today in preparation for the triangular rowing regatta to be held tomorrow.

It is hoped that this regatta will become an annual affair and with this point in view and with the idea of bringing increased good will and more friendly relations among the three schools engaging in the competition, President Karl T. Compton of M. I. T. will be host to all the crew squads at dinner tonight in the president's mansion on Memorial drive, which overlooks the rowing course on the Charles river.

At the request of Massachusetts Tech officials, recently, Harvard and Princeton agreed to resume athletic relations by participating in a triangular crew regatta as the guests of Technology. The occasion will mark the first time since 1926 that Princeton and Harvard have come together in an officially recognized athletic contest.

Princeton's oarsmen arrived early this morning on the Federal Express at the Back Bay station and this afternoon, when their own shells arrive from New Jersey, the Tiger navy will make final preparations for the meet.

Makeup of Tech Crew Still Undecided

Coach Bill Haines, the M. I. T. mentor, has not yet designated the men who are to comprise his heavy varsity boat tomorrow, but it is almost certain that the Tech lineup will be the same as that which met the Navy last week. This same heavy boat has been working out all week as a unit and the men have shown remarkable improvement in their strokes, timing and stamina.

Harvard's varsity crew which the Crimson proclaim to be the best Crimson eight in twenty years, has been brought to the peak of condition. Despite this fact, Coach Charlie Whiteside is making no predictions as to the relative merits of his boatmen.

Cassedy Will Row for Harvard

Cassedy, stroke of the Harvard eight, has completely recovered from the recent illness which kept him out of practice earlier in the week. He rowed with the varsity men on their long jaunt down the stream from the Newell boathouse yesterday.

Technology—Thieler, bow, No 2, Haggood, No 3, Pleasants; No 4, Regan, No 5 Cimorelli; No. 6, Ballentine, No 7, Miller; Dunning, stroke.

Princeton—West, bow; No. 2, Payion; No. 3, Merril; No. 4, Pease; No. 5, Williams; No. 6, Shennan, No. 7, Pflaumer; Crimore, coxswain.

Harvard: Holcom, bow; No 2, Hallowell; No. 3, Erickson; No 4, Webster; No. 5, Bancroft; No. 6, Bacon; No. 7, Saltonstall; No. 8, Cassedy; Holmes, coxswain.

Johnny Farrell on Golf

By JOHNNY FARRELL
(Former American Open Champion)
As Told to ALAN GOULD of the Associated Press.

USE THAT SPOON.

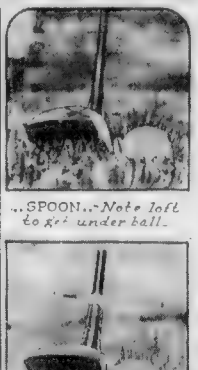
People often ask me what is the most important shot in golf.

For the professional stars, putting is the most important part of the game, for it is the work on the greens that tells the scoring tale.

For the average players, who make up more than 90 per cent of the whole golfing family, my conviction is that the drive is the most important shot.

A good drive has a tonic effect on most ordinary players. It is the most satisfying shot to pull off.

..SPOON..Not loft to get under ball.



.... use spoon instead of brassie in cuppy lie

more harm than good. I think 30 to 35 minutes is plenty for the practice of any shot. An hour a practice is equivalent to a full round and too much.

Ninety-nine times out of a 100, it is better to use the spoon than the brassie for full shots through the fairway. Seldom is a good distance obtained, whereas the spoon will. The next one or two shots may be dubbed or partly dubbed, but a first-rate drive usually means the half-way mark to the green.

In the full wood shot, the follow-through is most important. Once the fundamentals of an easy, relaxed stance are acquired, the individual player must adjust his own swing so that it is easy and natural, with a full follow-through. That's what gets the extra distance.

Too much practice often does more harm than good. I think 30 to 35 minutes is plenty for the practice of any shot. An hour a practice is equivalent to a full round and too much.

Ninety-nine times out of a 100, it is better to use the spoon than the brassie for full shots through the fairway. Seldom is a good distance obtained, whereas the spoon having greater loft, will produce better results.

The spoon is a good utility club. For the average player, it gets better results than a full No. 2 iron. It can be used to advantage off the tees, if the driver seems a little out of control.

Bobby Jones has had a habit for years of using his spoon for the first three or four holes off the tee, until he feels he is warmed up and swinging smoothly.

TOMORROW—THE STANCE

Cambridge Latin Blanked by B. C. H.

Bunched hits plus fine pitching by Bielier, gave Boston College high a 5 to 0 win over Cambridge Latin yesterday at Russell Field, Cambridge.

The Eagiets connected for three doubles in the sixth inning for three runs and scored two more runs in the eighth on a three-bagger, a single and a two-bagger. Bielier set down the Cantabrigians with two hits.

PAIR TIED FOR HONORS IN W. G. A.

By BILL GRIMES

Only two players, Mrs. E. H. Baker, Jr., Southern and Mrs. W. C. Quinby, Eastern, weathered the first half of the 11th annual Women's Golf Association of Massachusetts team matches with a perfect individual score.

As far as Mrs. Baker is concerned, it is an old story, but it is a new experience for Mrs. Quinby, who although she has ranked with the leaders of the association for years, has never hung up five consecutive victories.

Mrs. Baker has not met with a defeat during the team matches since the middle of the 1928 season, when she duplicated her success of the previous year by losing only one match.

With one exception, Mrs. Baker has won her matches by wide margins this spring. She started with a 7 and 5 victory over Mrs. C. E. Deland, Midland, set back Mrs. W. G. Dow Western 4 and 3, but in the next match, which was played at the Charles River Country Club, she was taken to the 17th green by Miss Grace English.

Mrs. Baker's fourth win was at the expense of Miss Rosamond Vahey, who was played at No. 1 for Central for the first time since she joined that team. Yesterday at Dedham, Mrs. Baker took Miss Edith Stevens into camp to the tune of 7 and 5.

Mrs. Quinby Barely Escapes Defeat

After opening her season with one-sided victories over Mrs. W. O. Dow and Miss Rosamond Vahey, Mrs. Quinby had a close call in her third match, when after being four up and five to play she was overtaken by Miss Ruth Batchelder, but managed to come through with a win at the home hole.

At The County Club last Monday, Mrs. Quinby was practically presented with her match with Mrs. D. M. Belcher, for the Northern player was four up at the stage of the match and then went into a wild streak which allowed her opponent to square the match at the 18th green.

Three putts on the 20th green by Mrs. Belcher opened the gate for Mrs. Quinby to win her fourth consecutive match, and yesterday she picked up eight more points by defeating Mrs. L. Q. White, Southern.

There are seven first team players who have won four out of five matches, two of whom, Mrs. Henri Prunaret, Western, and Mrs. O. A. Baldwin, Central, encountered their initial setbacks yesterday. Mrs. Prunaret went down before Miss Grace English, while Mrs. J. D. Woodin marred Mrs. Baldwin's perfect score.

The other players who have only met with one defeat in five matches are Mrs. Kellogg Boynton, Northern, Miss Martha Brewer, Central, Mrs. S. M. Gifford, Southern, Mrs. C. L. Newton, Midland, who is paying her first season of competitive golf, and Miss Frances Stebbins, also of Midland.

faddistic diet of chop and pineapple slices.

"I'm a cave-in, all right," said Jenny, and stretched her thin body outright on a divan and pressed her fingers into her eyes and bared her teeth in an on-edge fashion.

"Nerves. Underfed," said Rarick, eyeing her from the opposite side of the hearth

"Nerves, all right. Reason, all wrong."

There descended a silence characteristic of their times together. Taking up an object here and there, as she wandered aimlessly about the museum-like room, Jennifer began to whistle in short, breathy snatches.

"For Heaven's sake, Jennifer, stop it!"

"Sorry, mother."

Silence.

"Say, dad, what do you call this?"

"That's a Tau-crossed pastoral staff, French, about the 11th century . . ."

"No, I mean the gold panel above it!"

"Oh, that's a reredos of St. Peregrine. It's part of an old altar-table. I bought it at the Donetti auction at the same time I got the ivory panel of the Virgin Mary with the pearl crown there, over the doorway."

"I think it's a waste of those lovely seed pearls, Rarick. You might have them done into something wearable for Jennifer on me."

No Answer

He did not answer

"I was going to say, father, I saw what might be a sister panel to that reredos today, at Duveen's. I was there with Mary Dakin. She got caught in a tumbling market and was trying to unload two Romneys that came with her share of her grandfather's estate. By the way, wouldn't he interested, would you, father, in buying a pair of Romneys? Mangy-looking, but frightfully bona-fide. Girl with a Lamb. And Boy with a Goat. Or maybe his was a lamb, too. Well, anyway, Mary's asking fifteen thousand for the pair, and Duveen's sent a man to appraise."

"Not interested."

"What did they attick you for the pearl - incrusted reredos, Dad?"

"Kellman bid for me . . . something like twenty-five thousand, if I remember . . ."

"Good God!" said Jenny from her reclining position, blowing smoke and holding her cigarette at bare arm's length upward from her.

"Good God, she's hungry!" said Jennifer, and resuming her aimless tour.

Speed Boat

"A Baby Gar speed boat for your son would have cost half that much. Why is it so much easier to understand your own desire to own a sixteen-thousand-dollar piece of ivory slag than it is for you to understand a boy's desire for the things that mean youth and sport to him?"

"Because it is not his desire. I am convinced that all these notions to add more and more dangerous and expensive toys to the jumble of things with which you are cluttering his school life and educating both your children to demand, come from you."

"In which Jennifer is drawn direfully into the picture."

"Keep quiet, Jennifer."

"Sorry, mother."

"Your boy demands precious little."

"I realize that, Jenny. In fact, it is just my point."

"Fortunately, Rarick, I am of sufficiently tough fiber to nag in his behalf for some of the things he is too sensitive to nag for himself."

"What are some of those things, Jenny?"

"The things to which, as a rich man's son, he is entitled."

"Meaning . . ."

"O Lord! Rarick, I haven't it left in me to go over it all again."

"I'll go over it for you. Meaning things. Things to keep him moving instead of thinking. Devices for speed. For motion. Things to distract him from books, things to distract him from thinking."

A Scathing Reply

"Good Lord, dad, where do you get off? Things? You've spent half your life shoveling aside things into the shopping-bags of aside people who need aside things like safety-pins and stew-pans. You've glorified the American dime by making it stand for things. You're the "Thing King!"

How astute she was! Clever, slim Jennifer, with her sophisticated Egyptian-looking eyes, merciless in her shrewdness to lay him open to himself.

Dr. Gerkes entered then, after the inconsequential manner he had of appearing on a scene without the slightest preamble. His dinner clothes, which he called his "overalls," because he wore them when he lectured, hung from the rounded part of his back like a suit that had been suspended from a nail. His shuffling footsteps skidded the small rugs from under them like so much silent gravel.

There was a graciousness to Gerkes. A man of almost unlimited intellectual contacts, he could be loquacious enough on subjects where he felt informed, and an indulgent listener to those who, in his opinion, wanted to talk more than he. Stupidity he regarded as a cardinal vice. It made him unhappy.

On the other hand, there was an amusing mixture of the Socratic and Rameloisian about Gerkes. He loved the private and impolite jokes that had to be told behind the barrier of a hand, and the curbstone and the platform were alike his rostrums. He had never married, due principally to chronic lack of income and what he regarded as the popular fallacy that two could live as cheaply as one. His eye for a pretty woman was a quick, discerning one. It lit on Jennifer, who was standing in one of the pools of light. . .

Clumsy Pride

Rarick's pride in his friend was pretentious and clumsy.

"Gerkes, I wish you'd tell my daughter that story about the Taoist priest who once found himself, when a meteor fell, in Lahore, India. There's a mighty fine moral there." Or, "Gerkes, I'd like for my wife to hear your opinion of our own Arizona summers and how they compare with say a country like Switzerland. I cannot get my family to realize that they don't have to cross the Atlantic for beauty of scene or variety of climate."

"Three chamber-of-commerce cheers," said Jennifer, and held her cocktail glass up against the light.

"See America first," said Jenny, and gulped hers down.

It was the kind of patter for which Gerkes had little retort. The descent to the dining room through aisles of tapestries was made goose-step. Gerkes, who was never ill at ease, only silent where it seemed the better part of wisdom, plowed solemnly through the high-napped rugs.

Not even port wine or champagne-bup, made by Jenny at table in a frosted-silver pitcher over a melange of fresh, whole cling-stone peaches and black cherries, could succeed in drawing him out of the slough of amiable silence into which the occasion had thus far submerged him.

New Modes Worn by Golfers

By BARON GEORGE W. RANGEL
Universal Service Staff Correspondent

Biarritz, May 1—The continuance of good weather has given added impetus to golfing activities and filled with bright colors the eight courses that surround this French resort.

Two of these courses are here, one at St. Jean De Luz, one at Hendaye and soon a ninth will be renowned at Handaye on the Spanish border. Lord Robert Innes-Kerr, brother-in-law of the Duchess of Roxburghe, formerly Mlle. Goelet of New York, is expected to assume charge of this latest triumph to the popularity of the pastime.

AMERICANS ARE HOSTS

The return of Sam Park and his popular wife from the marriage of their daughter in New York has been impetus to American entertaining.

Mrs. Samuel Nave, the former Marie Herlihy; Mrs. Leonard H. Nason and her husband, the American writer who have the beautiful Villa Lou Pinet, are among the other Americans who have entertained recently. It is on the golf course, however, that new and fascinating effects in women's clothes are especially to be observed.

This was particularly true this other day when all roads led to neighboring Hossegor, where a golf tournament was in progress. Among those looking on were Mme. Ernest Plisson, the former Edna McClure, famous Follies beauty of 20 years ago, and her daughter-in-law, Mrs. Gerard Richardson, formerly Miss Ridie Leclair, daughter of Comdr. Hugh Pope LeClair, who, when he was a naval attache, was prominent in Paris society.

GAY SPORTS COSTUME

Mme. Plisson was attired soberly in black and wore a silver fox boa. Mrs. Richardson, however, wore a sports costume that drew considerable attention. It was in jersey, the blouse fastened across a diagonal line with bright metal clasps, while an orange skull cap matched an orange sash around the waist.

Another well-dressed woman was Mrs. O'Malley Keyes. She chose for the occasion a beach robe and flannel sports suit. The parting of the box-like coat revealed a soft white wool blouse trimmed with lace.

Bermuda Refuses Woman Suffrage

Hamilton, Bermuda, May 1 (AP)—A measure to confer suffrage on women was defeated in the Assembly yesterday by a vote of 21 to 11.

The opposition gave no reason for its rejection and remained silent throughout the session. Proponents lowered the Assembly flag to half-staff to express their sentiments over the failure of the measure.

Panama Asks Bids on Refined Sugar

Panama City, May 1 (AP)—The government today invited bids for a contract authorizing importation of 6,000,000 pounds of refined sugar free of import duty.

It is estimated this season a crop will total only 50,000 quintals and that 85,000 quintals will be needed for domestic consumption. The government has fixed $6.75 as the maximum wholesale price.

Gay Colors for Spectators at Sports

By ANN ARDEN

NOTHING NEW under the sun? Yes, there is and it's the hand-crocheted sweater designed by Schiaparelli when she was basking in the Riviera sun. Amused and inspired by the rustic shirts of the fishermen, she created the "fisherman's sweater."

NOW THAT sweaters have gone and gotten themselves refined nothing could be smarter than this jaunty short sleeved affair. Sometimes it pulls down just over the hips, or ties in a becoming surplice line.

AND MODERN, feminine fishermen wear a molded wool shirt in matching or contrasting shades. The result just breathes of the outdoor life and invigoration.

THIS IS the time of year when everyone watches the paper for news of the first outdoor sports events, the season when feminine fancy turns to thoughts of the newest spectator sports togs.

WHEN REPORTS from the races read that "a colorful crowd was present"—they will mean colorful in the brightest sense of the world. Every spectator will fly her own colors and there is not likely to be any monotony to the scene, either.

THE HANDKNIT sweater in monotone or striped effects is exceedingly smart when worn with a separate woolen skirt. This combination was seen repeatedly in the South, both for active and spectator wear.

NEW ENGLAND NEW BUILDING SHOWS GAIN

By FRANK H. MELOON

New building in New England is showing a gain again. Figures supplied us today by F. W. Dodge Corp. for the week ended April 28 show contracts awarded totaled $6,538,000. This compares with the weekly average to date of $5,886,400.

"It always has," remarked the farmer to the city people who asked if there was any likelihood of the rains ending. The decline of more than a month's duration in Wall and States Sts. finally ended with April. What will May bring? Many thousands of speculators and investors would like to know. No one expects that it will not shower again, but the stock market's comeback has cheered up many, at least for the time being.

Consolidated Gas of New York, one of the leading favorites with foreign as well as domestic investors over a long period, has just strengthened its board by the addition of Charles E. Mitchell. Mr. Mitchell is chairman of the National City Bank, one of the world's largest. There has been especially keen local interest in Mr. Mitchell's financial career, since it had its start in Boston.

New gasoline tax of 3 cts. a gallon went into effect in Massachusetts today to last for two years, when some new excuses for keeping it going will probably be offered on Beacon Hill. The increase will arouse scant interest at this time, because of the extremely low prices for gasoline, which make the tax paying "painless." Nevertheless gasoline occupies a position as the world's highest-taxed commodity.

The extra cent tax is expected to impose an additional tax burden of $5,000,000 a year on Massachusetts motorists.

One big Boston and New York investment house today sizes up the situation logically as follows:

"In business there is little doubt that the average consumer has his left eye on his own commodity, but his right eye on the stock market. Whether he is willing to buy materials or not may depend upon the action of securities. We certainly believe that the drying up of buying in some lines of trade in the last few weeks has been due to some extent to the action of the stock market.

"It will be interesting to watch and we believe it will prove to be true that if the stock market is able to do a little better, general business may pick up again to some extent."

Mr. Gaisman, Gillette Safety Razor's new chairman, is the inventor of the AutoStrop safety razor and founder of the AutoStrop Safety Razor Co. He was chairman of the board of directors of that company at the time of the merger of AutoStrop and Gillette in November 1930.

Gerard B. Lambert, Gillette's new president, was until 1928 president of the Lambert Pharmical Co., makers of Listerine. During the seven years he was president Lambert's annual net earnings increased from a little over $100,000 to approximately $7,000,000. At the end of 1928 Mr. Lambert, although then only 42 years old, retired from business, retaining only a directorship in the Lambert company. In connection with his new duties, Mr. Lambert will make his headquarters in Boston.

Today's News of Live Stocks in Wall Street

Explanation of better action by oil shares was seen today in announcement that Standard Oil Co of New Jersey had declared its regular dividend of 25 cents for the quarter and the usual 25-cent extra as well. Some bears had asserted the extra would be omitted.

Socony Declares Regular Dividend

Standard Oil Co. of New York directors today further dismissed dividend doubters by declaring the regular quarterly payment of 40 cents a share.

No Confirmation of Rumor Needed

With the good dividend news coming out on the Standard Oils, no confirmation was needed of the report that Rockefeller interests were buying again. This rumor was a very powerful piece of bullish ammunition because of the famous Rockefeller bid for 1,000,000 shares (never bought) that checked the break several months ago.

Auburn Auto on Another Rampage

Auburn Auto is the outstanding rampage performer of 1931. On top of yesterday's 30-point skyrocketing, the stock shot up 11 points more today before quieting down for a while.

Bethlehem's Rise One of Features

Bethlehem Steel's quick 2 point rise today was a feature of the popular industrials. Bethlehem soon showed a gain of 6 points from yesterday's lowest price, made shortly after the opening of the market. The first quarterly report of the corporation was in line with expectations, with 6 cents a share for the common after taking care of preferred dividends.

Decline in Loans Shows Liquidation

Decline of $114,000,000 in brokers' loans the past week emphasized that outright liquidation was primarily responsible for the market's weakness. The fact that the decline was the largest for any week since the week of November 12 suggested that perhaps the greater part of immediate necessitous liquidation has been completed.

Federal Reserve's Rate Small Factor

Maintenance of the Federal Reserve rate should exercise little effect marketwise, since the rate itself has been of little significance for many months. Besides, another week is coming and more after that—when a revision could be made. Many believe Britain's rather than America's needs are taken into account.

Allied Chemical Is Better Bought

It was recently disclosed here this week that Allied Chemical was close to the bottom objective of the bear clique. Improvement obviously was reflection largely of short covering, but there has been noticeable of late a much more impressive buying demand. Allied's average earnings over the eight-year period 1923-1930, inclusive, have been $9.84 a share.

Durant Denies Selling Rayon

William C. Durant denied a story, broadcast in the street, that he had disposed of his stock interest in Industrial Rayon to the duPonts. Control of the company, he said, is not for sale.

National Surety Bought for "Pull"

Buying of National Surety when it approached a 10 per cent yield, on the basis of the current $5 rate, was described as investment buying for the long pull.

Canadian Pacific Nervously Sold

Backwardness of Canadian Pacific, which slipped down to a new low this week, was ascribed to Canadian investors' nervousness over the dividend, now $2.50 annually.

United Aircraft Sponsors Ready

It was reported that more aggressive market sponsorship for United Aircraft will develop with the first signs of general market stability.

Move in Radio Is Explained

Short covering in Radio common, principally by former bulls who turned bears on the entire list, finally found reflection in the rally which carried the stock up. These bears have been covering stocks for several days.

Central Dividend Opinions Vary

Because there has been little support in New York Central at times recently, the financial district is inclined to discuss future dividends on the stock. Many are of the opinion that there may be another downward revision later this year unless business improves materially, but this view has been caused by the lack of the demand for the stock despite the high yield.

Salesman Trained by Insurance Companies Study Every Form of Life Contract Circumstances Alter Many Cases Savings Plan Should Be Considered

By Frank F. Loomis

It is only in recent years that the life insurance companies have found it necessary and greatly to their advantage to thoroughly train their salesmen, giving them complete knowledge of every form of life insurance contracts now written.

This thorough understanding is essential today to the successful life underwriter because of the many duties a life insurance policy is called upon to accomplish in a man's financial program.

Seldom are two men's circumstances alike, and after interviewing a prospective client, the trained life insurance salesman is capable of giving expert advice and outline an insurance program to meet this client's own particular needs and circumstances.

Governor Franklin Roosevelt of New York spoke recently before the life underwriters of New York city, urging the necessity of trained men in the life insurance business. He predicted the time will come when the public will insist that persons have no more right to enter the insurance business than they would to practice medicine, law or other of the skilled professions without proper training and qualification.

It is only the trained life insurance man, who has studied his work, who makes the success in which he aspires, and who is qualified and competent to render the service to his policyholders that they are entitled to.

The business of life insurance is one of the few industries that does not languish in dull times. No business in the United States today offers the future the life insurance business does, and the best time to enter the insurance field is when you are young.

Nearly all the large life companies conduct training schools for beginners, and with this training followed by experience and practice, a young man will soon become a well trained life underwriter, capable of presenting the right kind of life insurance policies to his prospects, and speak with authority and convincing force.

The well trained life insurance salesman today is as important to the business man as his banker is, and he is almost the average man's best friend. His advice should be sought on savings plans, as well as on all life insurance problems, for life insurance holds a unique position in any man's financial savings program.

How often have you heard men say:

"Life insurance is merely protection, it is no investment. It is all right if I die, but how much more could be done with the money if I put it into a good investment."

Life insurance would mean more to these men if they realized that it not only provides fully for the financial emergencies that arise "if they die," but in addition provides an ideal investment "if they live."

Life insurance is in reality the ideal plan for protecting the family and is the only savings investment that takes into consideration the time element which may be cut short by premature death in building an estate or in completing the family's financial program.

Let the trained life underwriter explain to you how one or more of the various life insurance contracts, listed below, will fit into your savings plan.

Life, endowment and term policies for personal protection, providing settlement of the proceeds by lump sum or by instalment or income payments, to meet your requirements.

Total and permanent disability, and double indemnity provisions.

Retirement income policies.

Annuity contracts.

Special contracts for business protection.

Joint life insurance for employes.

Wholesale insurance for employes.

Salary deduction insurance, under which payment of premium on employes' insurance may be made easy through employer co-operation.

Whatever your insurance needs may be, the well trained life insurance salesman can fill them for you.

It is important to remember that if you desire any change in your present policy, consult the representative of the company in which you are now insured. Do this, also before letting your policy lapse.

Refer all your problems to him especially any suggestions or plans submitted by representatives of other life insurance companies if such plan involves the cancelling or surrendering of your present holdings. You cannot change your policy from one company to another without suffering a loss. Give your insurance agent your confidence.

BOND MARKET HAS ADVANCE

New York, May 1 (AP)—A general advance featured the bond market today. Spirited activity prevailed during the first hour but the trading pace slackened as the day advanced.

Traders reported that a considerable number of bids which did not keep pace with the rising prices remained unfilled. More of the buying was ascribed to European accounts than recently.

Brazilian obligations made some of the widest gains apparently as a result of returning confidence in the credit standing of that nation. The 8s of 1941 and the Central Railway Electric 7s jumped sharply. The 6½s of 1926-57 of the federal government appreciated fractionally.

Railroad obligations, especially those of secondary standing, gave the best account of themselves. Gains among such issues were the rule, although the volume in many of them was of moderate proportions. Similar actions occurred in the utilities.

Loans of the United States government were dull but firm. Stock privilege issues made irregular gains.

Purity Bakeries Corp. declared a quarterly dividend of 75 cents on the common, placing the stock on a $3 annual basis, against $4 previously. Dividend is payable June 1 to stock of record May 15. Purity Bakeries reports for 16 weeks ended April 18 net profit of $630,995 after interest, depreciation, federal taxes and minority interest, against $1,248,545 in like period of 1930.

Kendall Company's Profits Increase

The Kendall Co. reports for the first 12 weeks of 1931 net profit of $115,788 after depreciation, bond interest, taxes and provision for dividends on preferred stock subsidiaries in the hands of the public. This compares with $33,074 for the same period of 1930. After provision of $51,850 for dividends on series "A" preferred stock, net profit to surplus was $63,938.

Railway Express Report Is Given

Railway Express Agency, Inc., reports February rail transportation revenues, after taxes, interest, etc., of $5,660,140 available for payments to participating roads and other carriers for express privileges, against $7,658,514 in February, 1930. For two months ended February 28 rail transportation revenues were $11,229,620, against $15,728,746.

Norfolk & Western Paying Off Mortgage

Norfolk & Western is paying off its 50-year general mortgage in sum of $7,235,000. This mortgage was a first lien on main line from Norfolk to Bristol, Va., about 408 miles. The bonds were taken up out of treasury funds and no new financing is contemplated. Retirement of these bonds will reduce fixed charges $434,100 a year.

Rubber Plant on Increased Schedule

Pres John A. McMilian of Dayton Rubber Co. stated the plant is operating on an eight-hour six-day schedule, or at about capacity, against 60 per cent last month.

"Dealers' sales during April showed a substantial improvement, with truck and bus tires reflecting the largest improvement," Mr. McMillian said.

Curb Exchange Acts on Volume Figures

CURB MARKET VOLUME CUT

New York, May 1—Narrow changes and a reduced volume of trading marked the beginning of the new month of the curb today. Profit-taking tended to hold in check much of an addition to yesterday's rapid gains, but the utilities were helped by further covering.

Niagara Hudson caught up with other members of the power company group. Election of a Morgan partner to the board of Consolidated Gas of New York, apparently to represent United Corporation's holdings in that company, was viewed as foreshadowing closer relationship between Niagara Hudson and the big metropolitan utility, and there was moderate activity in the stock.

Firmness of the oils was noticeable. Standard of Indiana developed considerable strength, rallying more than a point, while Standard of Kentucky also advanced. Vacuum was somewhat erratic, although it moved narrowly.

Issues of Selected Industries strengthened announcement of the prospective affiliation with Tri-Continental, whose stock is listed on the big board.

Report Issued for Continental Baking

Continental Baking Corp. reports for 15 weeks ended April 11, 1931, net income after all charges, including interest, depreciation and taxes, of $822,383, equivalent to $1.58 a share on 519,661 shares of $8 preferred stock. This compares with net income in the 15 weeks to April 12, 1930, of $1,182,979, equivalent to $2.28 a share on 518,928 preferred shares, and 4 cents a share on 291,813 class A shares after allowing for preferred dividends.

Jersey Standard's Extra Is Ordered

New York, May 1 (AP)—Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey directors today declared the usual extra dividend of 25 cents a share in addition to the regular quarterly disbursement of 25 cents.

Declaration of this regular extra was good news to Wall Street, where there had been some apprehension lest the extra payment be discontinued in view of the unsettled conditions in the oil industry.

Selected Industries Management Retires

The present management of Selected Industries, Inc., proposes to retire from active management of the corporation May 11, the date of the annual meeting. R. S. Reynolds, president, also is president of Reynolds Metals Co. and United States Foil Co.

Reorgaization of Utilities Planned

New York, May 1 (AP)—A reorganization committee has approved a plan of reorganization for Inland Utilities, Inc., Twin States Natural Gas Co. and Midland Natural Gas Co. The plan contemplates sufficient refinancing to place the companies on a firm basis. Details were not announced.

U. S. STEEL IS OFF TO A NEW 1931 LOW

New York, May 1—Prices were mixed in Wall st. dealings today, although most of the session the market showed a generally improved tone. This was the result of yesterday's smart rebound.

The advance lost vitaily after the violent flurry of short covering yesterday, and the market turned spotty after a morning and midday advance.

BEARS START DRIVE.

There was a spirited bear drive in the afternoon, with U. S. Steel the principal target. The stock was driven to a new 1931 low in the final half hour.

Stocks had turned hesitant earlier in the afternoon with a break in Pullman, following issuance of the quarterly report, showing only 15 cents a share earned against dividend requirements of $1.

The quick bear thrust in the last hour sent stocks rapidly downward after prices had risen moderately in the earlier trading. U. S. Steel, which had been up a point, broke more than 6 under Thursday's close.

New York Central touched a new low.

Westinghouse, Allied Chemical and Case dropped sharply and losses of 1 to 1½ developed in Consolidated Gas, American Telephone, Union Pacific, General Electric and du Pont. Sales were around 3,000,000 shares.

The bond market gave further evidence of the lifting of selling pressure. While the change of trend reespresented no fundamental change in economic conditions, it at least represented a growing conviction that troublesome situations had been smoothed out.

STANDARD OILS PAY

Dividend news was in the main reassuring, although earnings statements appearing were still of a character to cause doubts over maintenance of some rates later in the year.

Standard Oil Company of New Jersey declared both the regular and regular extra dividends of 25 cents a share, although Wall Street would not have been surprised had the extra been discontinued. Standard of New York also declared its regular payment.

The oil industry as a whole, however, is having difficulty keeping out of the red. Among the latest earnings reports is that of Continental Oil, one of the so-called independent units, which showed a first quarter deficit of nearly $2,500,000.

The $1 quarterly dividend ordered by Bethlehem Steel was better than had been looked for by the more pessimistic observers. Wall Street generally would not have been surprised had the previous quarterly rate of $1.50 been cut in half.

Week-end business reviews indicated little change in the generally static conditions. The reports of building contracts let for the third week of April was somewhat discouraging, but in several other lines the recent rate of decline appeared to have slackened. Weekly tabulations show a further general sag in commodity prices.

BANK REVIEW IS GIVEN

Relatively little change occurred in the level of industrial activity in New England during March as compared with February the Federal Reserve Bank of Boston reported today in its monthly review.

Increases occurred during March in the amount of raw cotton and wool consumed by New England Mills, as compared with February, and silk machinery activity likewise increased.

Lambert President of Gillette Razor

Henry J. Gaisman has been elected chairman of the board of directors and chairman of the executive committee of the Gillette Safety Razor Co. and Gerard B. Lambert has been elected president, director and member of the executive committee.

Wheat Is Firmer in Chicago Market

Chicago, May 1—Wheat closed firmer on the Chicago Board of Trade today. Other grains were easy. Wheat was steady to ⅜c up at the close. Corn May new was up ¼c while other deliveries were ½ to 2¼c down. Oats were ⅜ to ⅝c lower and rye ⅝ to 1c down.

Beef Prices Down 27 to 32 Per Cent

Chicago, May 1 (AP)—Wholesale prices of dressed beef dropped during April to levels from 27 to 32 per cent lower than a year ago a monthly review issued by the Institute of American Meat Packers said today.

New Offerings of Bonds Are Larger

New bond offerings for the week ended May 1 totalled $18,371,500, compared with $11,720,949 last week and $164,217,000 in the corresponding week last year.

ADVICE TO INVESTORS IS FREE

Before you buy or sell stocks or bonds, you ought to secure unbiased expert advice. Send your investment inquiries with stamp to Frank H. Meloon, Financial Editor, Boston Evening American, 5 Winthrop Sq., Boston. All replies are made by mail direct.

DROP IN NET

F. L., Winchester—Fifty shares American-Hawaiian Steamship were bought at 21. Shall I hold or sell?

Ans.—The advice you want would entail guesswork. We can be of no assistance. American-Hawaiian Steamship is a speculation. There is no regular dividend rate. The latest payment was $8 a share July 15, 1930. Two dollars a share was paid January 2, 1930; in 1929, $1. Operations for year ended December 31, 1930, showed a large drop in earnings. Net profit of $285,523, or 60 cents a share contrasted with net of $1,187,421, or $2.49 a share in the previous year. At recent levels you had a 13-point loss.

A SPECULATION

K. H., Somerville—I have quite a sum tied up in Sinclair. Ans.—Sinclair Consolidated Oil common is a speculation. For six months ended June 30, 1930, earnings declined to 40 cents a share, contrasted with $1.02 for similar preceding period. For year ended December 31, 1929, net was $2.92 a share, compared with $2.21 in 1928. With quarterly payment of $1 a share January 15, 1931, the Oil. What do you think of it? stock was put on a $1 annual basis, against the previous $2 rate from December, 1929. We could not comment on the market position.

MAY MEAN CHANGE

A. M., Everett—What is your opinion of Northern Pacific? I have twenty-five shares much above current levels.

Ans. The decline in Northern Pacific to a level where the yield is more than 10 per cent, indicates, we think, uncertainty over continuance of current $5 dividend paid from 1922. Preliminary report indicates earnings of $4 a share against $8.79 in 1929 and $8.52 in 1928. For two months ended February 28, 1931, deficit from operations was [illegible],602, compared with net operating income of $363,671 for similar two months of 1930. According to official statement March showed no improvement. No one knows how long you must wait for an upward market trend to develop.

BUY BONDS

S. C., Melrose—Several years savings amount to $6000. I want to buy some good securities, but am not in a position to take chances with the money. What do you suggest?

Ans. You need bonds. Keep $2000 in the savings bank. Buy $2000 Title Guarantee & Trust 5s and a similar amount of Steneck Trust 5½s. The annual income is $210. Principal and interest are guaranteed.

MORE TO INVEST

Mrs. F. S., Waltham—In a savings bank I have $6000, of which I want to invest $4000. I am middle-aged, and already own a few shares American Telephone & Telegraph.

Ans. Keep American Telephone & Telegraph. For your present investment, buy $2000 Title Guarantee & Trust 5s, 10 shares Jersey Central Power & Light 7 per cent preferred and 30 Southern California Edison preferred "A." Here [illegible] total cost of less than $4000 and a combined annual income of $222.

We are delighted to introduce a new poet—Mister Satsumoto—who has taken the trouble to send us his initial composition. We hope this is the beginning of a long and pleasant association.

To My Friend

Dear my friend, I cannot write
The poem like when I am older
I might
But I thank you very much in advance
For your attention which I trust
Will make me practice poem writing like I must.
I am in grocery selling business
But I give my time to poem somehow
And trust to your generous consideration
Thank you very much for this matter.—Mister Satsumoto.

MAKE-BELIEVE

By FAITH BALDWIN

Larry Calls on Diana Hackett

By FAITH BALDWIN.

"I WON'T live on your father's or mother's money," declared Larry.

"Well," said Jenny with a sigh, "I'll supply the jam on the dry crust. After all, Larry, I've some of my own."

So that was that. Mary Lou and Margaret and Lorrimer viewed the beglamoured, ridiculous, dear couple with mingled emotions. Envy was uppermost, as far as Mary Lou and Lorrimer were concerned. He said so, later.

"I envy those kids—they've everything they want, Delight."

And as she didn't answer, he urged, low, compellingly:

"I—I'm not breaking any promises, but how long are you going to keep me waiting—how long?" he asked, again.

To her utter consternation, amazement and anguish she began to cry, quite simply and heart-brokenly, like a child. Her little face was all distorted, and the big tears ran unchecked down her pink cheeks.

They were, luckily, quite alone, in the morning room, the day after Jenny's engagement had been thus informally announced. Lorrimer was instantly contrite.

"Darling, don't! What is it? I didn't mean to hurt you. I can't stand seeing you cry—"

Reckless, for all his promises, he took her in his arms, and she yielded briefly to the blessed comfort of his strength about her and his lips on her hair, leaning her absent head against him, and sobbing quite quietly, but as if she couldn't stop.

"I haven't seen you cry," he mused, "since—since the day you came back to me. And I haven't heard you sob like that. Delight, since the day I left you to go back to the front . . ."

"I'm sorry to be such an idiot," she muttered.

"Was it the fall this morning? You didn't lie to me when you said you weren't hurt?" he asked anxiously. "Were you pretty well shaken up—shall we have Doc in to look you over?"

"No, I didn't lie. I'm quite all right," she said and touched his coat sleeve with her finger tips and tried to smile.

She'd taken a tumble that morning, Lady Bountiful having been more capricious than usual. But she hadn't been hurt, not a bit. She had climbed back into the saddle and dared the beautiful animal to do that to her again! No, her fall hadn't shaken her, but her emotions had.

It couldn't go on much longer, she thought.

Nor could it, although she had no idea what the veiled, not far distant future was holding for her, for them all.

Shortly before the opening night of the imported English revue, Larry Mitchell was sitting in an apartment, in a small hotel in the West Forties, interviewing, for publicity's sweet sake, a young English woman who was billed as Diana Hackett, but who, for purposes of that publicity was to be rumored as "Lady Diana," the daughter of a belted earl.

Miss Hackett—or was it Lady Hackett—Larry wasn't sure, not being quite up to the etiquette of titles—shared the apartment with several of her sister 'thespians. But she was alone in it with Larry at the moment, a very self-possessed, very good-looking young English woman, but rather hard of eye and with a few delicate facial lines which her clever make-up could not quite conceal. Her voice was pleasant, rather light and heavily colored with the accent known as "English."

Her story was smooth enough. Her father and mother were dead, the family estate had to be sold. No, she'd rather not use the title on the program but, of course, if it leaked out, as it were, it wouldn't do any harm, would it? Yes, her part was quite good and she had a song called "Whose little girl friend are you?" which had been especially written for her by the composer. She was twenty-three. "Is that so?" asked Larry. "Not by seven years, your ladyship!" But he asked it mutely.

Tea was served, Lady Diana carried. Her favorite flowers, "orchids, or perhaps you'd better say daisies, it's more unusual," she said. Her favorite jewels, sables; her most adored jewel, the pearl. And so on ad infinitum.

When the interview ended Larry had quite a pocketful of notes he decided suddenly that he liked her, no matter how many of the statements she made, her blue eyes danced. She reminded him of someone he knew, very faintly. He couldn't place the resemblance. She was small and her thick hair was frankly bennaed and her figure full but very pretty.

"How do you like the Statue?" he asked her, mechanically, and she answered, quite as automatically:

"I adore them. Too divine. Your men are so attractive and your girls are so very pretty and well dressed."

Tomorrow—The pretty actress tells Larry she was born in America.

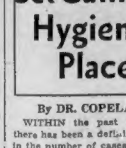
Set Camp in Hygienic Place

By DR. COPELAND.



Dr. Copeland

WITHIN the past two years there has been a definite increase in the number of cases of malaria in the United States. Many sections of the country, which have been free from this disease for many years, are now reporting malaria.

Before it became known that the "anopheles" mosquito carried the parasite responsible for this disease, malaria was a common ailment. Not only did it thrive in North America but it was found in all countries where this type of mosquito thrived.

After careful study of the anopheles mosquito, as to its mode of living habits, much was accomplished. With removal of this pest and measures of protection taken against, their return the disease soon became a rarity. It was found only in communities and countries where sanitary measures could not be taken.

The disease is usually given its old name of "chills and fever." The first sign is a severe chill, followed by a high fever, sweat and headache.

The attacks are periodic in their nature. They come and go, the attacks usually recurring every other day. In some cases the fever is continuous, but in the majority of cases it rises and falls, first ushered in by a chill.

Some of the authorities claim the recent outbreaks of this disease are due to increased automobile travel. They claim that many automobilists camp in unhygienic spots.

Everybody living in regions where the dangerous mosquito is common must protect themselves and others by adequate sanitary measures. During the malarial season, persons living in infected regions must arm themselves against the disease.

Let us determine that next season we shall do better. Let us renew our attacks against the pests which carry this uncomfortable ailment.

What's in Fashion Today

By AMOS PARRISH

NEW YORK, May 1—Probably you wouldn't wear a polo coat to a formal tea party. But you surely could wear it—or any other of the season's sports coats —shopping, lunching informally or marching smartly down the swankiest avenue in town.

The words "informal" and "sport" as applied to coats this spring don't indicate that they're loose and baggy and sturdy and nondescript in cut and color. Nor that they are only appropriate for golf galleries or country wear. "sports" as applied to coats this all. They're as much dan to their cut and as much character to their fabrics and colors as any of the dressier coats.

They use some of the same woolens dressier coats use. The monotone tweeds, for instance. And the nubby crepey woolens.

Details found on more formal coats are found on sports coats, too. Like revers and scarfs and kilts.

In fact, if you choose a sports coat this season, you've a coat that's useful for almost any event except the most formal. A 1931 sports coat is a good general wardrobe item. It's equally smart for city or country. It's appropriate for rumble seat or limousine. And is especially fine for travel.

One of the most useful of these sports coats is the reefer type—a slim, double-breated affair with wide lapels and a nipped-in waistline.

One is sketched at the right. You're seeing it now on the city streets and country lanes, on trains and ships and even airplanes . . . made of diagonal tweeds and cheviots in dark colors.

Later on in the summer you'll see it in light pastels. And then, of course, it will be more definitely a sports and resort costume.

Polo Coats

The polo coat, one of the favorites of younger fashionables, is shown at the center. It has some of the details of the reefer . . . the wide lapels and double-breasted closing.

But it fits more loosely through the arms and bodice and is worn belted. It's not quite as tailored-looking as the other. And lots of women find it easier to wear.

Specially fine for the car because it doesn't muss easily. And can stand rain, too, if it has to.

Eggshell is the newest color for polo coats, though the regulation tan shade is still fashionable. And an eggshell coat with colored felt hat is a good-looking a sports outfit as you'd want.

Swagger Coats

Softer and more dressmaker-like is the swagger coat, sketched at the top left. This is most often made of tweed in soft colorings. It's a loose coat, hanging free from the shoulders when worn in the smartest manner.

But it can be wrapped if you want it that way for protection against dust or wind.

A new variation of this swagger coat has a convertible collar that is half cape and half shawl, and can be crushed up almost any way you want it. The coat is worn unbelted or belted.

It's just as easy to plan an ensemble around a sports coat as any other coat. It may take a little more thought about color schemes, as the colors of sports coats are apt to be a little brighter. But you can get some mighty effective results.

Beauty Box

PERFUME MAKERS must let out a loud holler of mirth when they read about famous movie queens who mix their own scents. The business of compounding florited and synthetic oils into lovely bouquet blends is something akin to art. It would probably be easier for the perfume chemist to perform as a movie star than it would be for the lady of the screen to create a perfume that would receive acclaim of fastidious noses.

TEMPTING FATE

Today's True Story

ALL THE girls in Leedsville breathed a sigh of relief when Celia Fox announced the date of her wedding.

"It's time she got married," one debutant on the shady side of twenty said vehemently. "She's usurped all the men in town for the last ten years."

Meanwhile, little Celia Fox prepared for her wedding, joyously unaware of the relief she was affording the unattached damsels of her home town. She knew vaguely that "the girls" didn't like her much, but, so long as the man did, she didn't mind. She was mad about Ray Allen, who had won her after a whirlwind courtship.

A few days before the wedding she sat with her hero on the front porch of her home, and suddenly she said, "You know, mother was right about one thing. We hardly do know each other. But we chime so beautifully, don't you think?"

Ray laughed heartily, and when he laughed he threw back his head and his gigantic shoulders and guffawed.

Waiting for Her

"Know each other? Honey, we've known each other since you were born. I've just been waiting for a girl like you, someone with your looks and your spirit. I'd hate a girl with no spirit. I'm going to take you back West and show you some real life on my uncle's ranch in California. He wants me to run it for him, and I'm sick of this office work, anyway—"

"Friends? Why, you've already left them. They were all men, from what I understand. We'll take your mother with us, plenty of room for her on that ranch."

"You mean I'd be out in the desert country without any — any dances—or any moving pictures or theaters or—country clubs?"

"Say, are you joking?" Ray looked at the girl sitting on the swing beside him, drew her face toward him, kissed her suddenly, wafting her to the seventh heaven of happiness. She forgot about ranches and country clubs—temporarily.

But next morning she awoke with an ache in her, a shudder of prospective loneliness. Why, what would she do outside of her little world? Who would pay court to her. Here in her home town she was a personage, a popular girl.

Impulsively she telephoned to Arthur Smith.

"I just want to say goodby to him,"—she told herself—"to tell him I'm sorry I had to hurt him so much when I broke our engagement."

But she heard that Arthur was going around with that stupid Mary Madden, and this hurt Celia's pride.

Arthur responded immediately, asking her to drive with him in his car. They sped along a populous country road, and then suddenly Arthur turned the car in a lane.

"I have a few things to say to you," he remarked grimly.

She was frightened by the set look in his brown eyes.

"Celia," he said, "there are things you ought to know before you go away with this man and leave your home town and the men you've ruined for life—forever. One is, that I think you're a mean, contemptible flirt. I despise you. You've been going about with each new man who thinks up a new line of flattery for you. But you get bored with that, and now you've found a man who doesn't flatter you at all.

"He bullies you, the more power to him! But he doesn't know what he's getting in for. He doesn't know there isn't a steadfast emotion in your shallow head, that you are merely taken with the novelty of his methods. Why, you're without all human kindness, without—without—Suddenly he took her in his arms, held her close. "He can't have you. You may be contemptible, but I—love you. I can't help it."

Celia, struggling to leave his arms, was aware of a car stopping suddenly behind them. She heard a feminine voice, sharp feminine laughter. She slunk down in her seat, submitting to Arthur's caresses, waiting for the car to leave. She dared not look behind. She heard a masculine voice shouting:

Too Late!

"By-by, Celia," and turned about—too late.

Ray was driving off in his car, with a woman beside him. How had he found her here? What devilish trick had Arthur planned for his vengeance? She struggled out of his arms and burst into hopeless tears.

Celia was frantic with misery. She tried to reach Ray, but his home telephone was disconnnected. Telegrams were returned to her unopened. Ray's office informed her that he had left them and returned to the West.

And so at last she gave up and sank back into despair. Everything was lost through her stupid, blind, selfishness. She had wanted real love—and a court of masculine applause at the same time. She had wanted reassurance of her power over men and had lost the only man in her life who had ever meant anything to her. Parties were stupid, empty things now. She never went to them, but stayed at home brooding. One evening she opened the front door—and ran plump against the hard, manly chest of Ray Allen.

He didn't upbraid her, and he didn't snatch her into his arms. He merely said, as though he were speaking to a naughty child who had been kept in a dark closet for punishment, "Well, are you ready to leave all your tomfoolery and settle down?"

She said, "Oh, yes!" and laid her head on his chest and clung to him.

He took her in his arms and kissed her fiercely, and said: "You'll be a hard one to tame, but, darling, you sure are worth it."

Revenge on 'Date' Breaker

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I was introduced to a young man at a party a few weeks ago. He asked to see me home and invited me to go out with him the next evening. But he didn't show up, and now I expect to run into him at another party. How shall I treat him—rudely, as he treated me when he broke an engagement and sent no word, speak coldly to him, or ignore him completely?

L. B.

Dear L. B.—When a young man has been as uncivil as this one, don't you think it would be flattering his vanity if you ignored him or attempted to pay him back with equal rudeness. That would show he had hurt you. Be pleasant, but it shouldn't make any more engagements with a youth so lacking in good manners that he doesn't know enough to phone some sort of excuse when he breaks an engagement.

The Chauffeur's Story

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

Some weeks ago I read of a man working in a hotel, and a girl—one of the guests—had tried to amuse herself by flirting with him. She was sane enough to realize she was just playing a game. My own case is like that. I'm chauffeur in a wealthy family, not a bad-looking guy, and if my father—a doctor—could have the eyes also, I should have a college education. But he couldn't, and I'm just one of the "help." The girl is a peach and also a devil. I fell for her immediately, but remembered my place. She began to be very sweet to me when we were alone, meantime driving me crazy by having one hand or her dances with her boy friends. I told her I intended to quit my job and she threw her arms around me, kissed me, and asked me not to go. I asked her if she loved me and she only laughed. I know my job is not for staying in this place. I feel degraded, and all the time I'm getting deeper and deeper in love.

LIVERY.

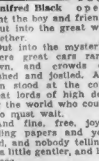
Dear Livery: The sensible thing for you to do would be to quit, but what else can you do in the sensible thing? Our common sense realizes and points the way, but our emotions lead us in quite another direction. It must be unbearable, driving this girl to dances with other men. You have your life before you. Why don't you sign up for a long sea voyage? Lots of men have taken that way to forget unhappy love affairs.

True Friendship of a Dog for His Little Master

By WINIFRED BLACK.

THE LITTLE boy went downtown with his dog the other day.

To tell the truth about it, the little boy and the dog ran away together.



Winifred Black

They were tired of backyards and brothers, and people who tapped on the window and said, "Don't do that, and be careful now, son."

And so they watched for a good chance and when the grocery boy opened the little gate in the backyard one day, away went the boy and friend, the dog—out into the great wide world, together.

Out into the mysterious place where great cars ran up and down, and great crowds of people pushed and jostled. And policemen stood at the corners like great lords of high degree, telling the world who could go, and who must wait.

And fine, free, joyous boys, selling papers and yelling like mad, and nobody telling them to be a little gentler, and lower their voices.

And the dog had just as much fun as the little boy.

Down among the crowds they hurried—the runaway boy and the run-away dog. Across busy streets, whipping around cars and darting through crowds, as if the very spirit of youth, adventure and gay courage led them.

All at once something terrible happened.

The man on the truck couldn't help it—he did his best, he tore at his brakes till they screamed. But it was too late, the little boy was under the wheels.

Poor little runaway boy, he opened his eyes just once, just long enough to look into the faithful brown eyes of his runaway dog, who was licking his face and trying to ask him, please to get up, and run down the street again.

Please, and please.

But the little boy could not get up, he couldn't even breathe any more.

The truck driver wanted to take him in his arms, but the runaway dog didn't like that truck driver, and he was not laughing for joy this time, when his white teeth shone.

And late in the afternoon when they finally untied him at the police station—whiz! he was off like a shot.

Back into the crowd, again, back to the place where the little boy he loved had died.

What would you give for just one friend that loved you like that?

Some Ways of Cooking Celery

By MARTHA LEE.

From Martha Lee's Friday Morning Broadcast Over Station WAAB

TODAY WE'RE going to talk about a vegetable that they tell us is good for our nerves. Celery!

Martha Lee

Celery is delicious, tender and served fresh and crisp as one buys it in the market. But many people like it cooked, and especially after the hearts are removed from the fresh state, there is considerable left which is still tender and which can be used to advantage in cooked dishes. Here is an especially delicious one.

SCALLOPED CORN AND CELERY

Bring 1 cup diced celery and ½ cup diced green peppers to boiling in salted water, drain. Put alternate layers of corn, celery and peppers, 1 tsp. salt and ⅛ tsp. pepper in a baking dish. Pour ½ cup milk over and cover with ½ cup bread crumbs. Bake 45 minutes or until celery is tender in moderate (375 deg.) oven. Serves six.

VEGETABLE MEDLEY

Fry in 6 tbsps. fat, 2 sliced onions, 1 cup celery (1 inch pieces), 2 green peppers cut in rings, 2 cups cooked lima beans, and 1 large sliced cucumber, all together very slowly in a heavy skillet until tender and a golden brown. Season to taste with salt and pepper. Serves eight.

CELERY AND CHEESE CASSEROLE

1 cup cheese, cut fine
2 cups cooked diced celery
1 cup cooked spaghetti
½ cup buttered bread crumbs
1 cup white sauce.

Mix all ingredients except crumbs. Place in a baking dish and cover with the crumbs. Bake in a moderate oven. Time in baking, 20 minutes. Temperature, 325 deg. Serves six.

Faithfully yours,

Martha Lee

Stir the mixture until nearly as thick as cake dough. Pour in a buttered pan quickly, then let stand for 5 minutes, and cut in squares.—Mrs. Freddie Libby, Route 1, Box 43, Lancaster, N. H.

MACAROON PIE

1 tbsp. cornstarch

MYSTERIOUS WAYE

CHAPTER 39

Love's Alchemy

OF MY SOJOURN in that excellent and extremely well-run Nursing-Home, the Monastery, I have not space, time nor desire to tell, for I wish to write not of myself, but of Marjorie—of Marjorie who now came into my life and altered it and me.

Not intentionally; not by anything she did, but by being Marjorie.

I saved her life, but she saved my soul . . . my real self. . . . Marjorie, the child whom for 20 pieces of silver—or 10,000 pieces of gold—this dog would have betrayed to a cruel death.

I came to the Monastery with my soul, mean and small as it was, filled with thoughts of vengeance and murder.

Even now, gradually, almost from that hour, the subtle change began, and in dual way.

Not only had Rosemary come again into my life in the form of Marjorie Lauderdell, reawakened the noblest of all human emotions, but, for the first time in many years, I was at last thinking of some one other than myself.

Gradually I thought less of vengeance, murder and destruction, and more of help and salvation; less and less of the affairs of the wretched John Deere Waye Vanderleur St. Clair, and more and more of those of Marjorie Lauderdell.

The Monastery in the role of avenger, but in that of protector and rescuer.

I was not biding my time, merely to choose the occasion for my vengeance, but awaiting until the arrest and execution of Chink Dorson should leave me free to move about without fear of arrest—a very real fear, for my description had been broadcast by the police as that of a suspicious stranger who had hung about at Witherby End, and had mysteriously disappeared by early morning train, immediately after the murder.

Possibly, even if arrested on suspicion and proved to have been in the house that night, I could clear myself of the charge of murder, but I might as well be hanged as sent back to live a lingering death in the American prison from which I had escaped.

Once Chink Dorson was arrested, found guilty and hanged, I could then set about effecting Marjorie's escape from her position of danger.

For my own fate I cared little; but, when I would be the child's fate if, escaping, I were arrested in her company, and she again fell into the clutches of that woman, her uncle's wife, and this vilee man, Charters?

The moment that I saw Marjorie I loved her, because she was my daughter Rosemary.

Imperceptibly but quickly my deep devoted love for her changed completely, and, while loving her as I fell in love with her.

I can express myself no better than that, and can make myself no clearer.

Women and men of understanding will understand, and, to others, no words of mine could explain the change that gradually came about.

We had a meeting-place, a secluded spot of our own among the ancient runs that gave the Nursing-Home its name; and there we would meet to compare notes and make plans.

Peace and Joy

If I helped her to happiness, she brought to me that which I had never expected to know again —peace, and that joy and happiness which only peace can bring.

The change in me was, of course, almost imperceptible, but the day dawned when I realized that I was no longer waiting at

Loved Her

It was this that first brought realization—in a flood of golden light filling my soul with joy ineffable—for I soon found that, instead of approaching our trysting place in the spirit of a father about to meet an adored daughter, I was doing so in the true spirit of a lover.

That Charters and his foul son had done me the deadliest wrong was not now the reason for my wrath against them. It was because of their intent to injure Marjorie that I hated them. Had I never seen Marjorie I would have killed them both in my own way and at my own time. Having fallen in love with Marjorie, I would have abandoned my vengeance (for all desire for it had died in me) but for their foul plot against her.

But no! In the very act of softening to forgiveness of them, for what they had done to Rosemary, for filthy gold—what did I find? That they were again about to destroy her.

For this plot was again an attack upon my Rosemary, Rosemary-Marjorie . . . my child, my heart's desire.

If, for her preservation, these dogs must die, I would be their slayer. But in no spirit of vengeance for wrongs done to me.

And so, ere long, my role completely changed and I, who had come to kill, remained to save, though killing might well play a necessary part in saving.

And then were anxious days indeed, for there is no anxiety to equal that which a lover feels on behalf of his beloved.

Knew Plot

It may be imagined that I lost no time in taking all possible steps to secure Marjorie's safety. To the utter bewilderment of the scoundrels in whose power she was, I promptly revealed the incredible fact that I knew all about the plot, even to the exact figures of the sum that was to be the price and reward of their villainy.

I made it very clear to Charters that any injury to Marjorie would precede his arrest by the briefest space, and showed him that I knew enough of the past of himself and his accomplices to bring his present edifice of respectability crashing about the ground, and himself and them to the gallows.

Naturally I was under no illusion that anything but my life stood between Marjorie and death, but, thank God, I had already, for my own personal ends, so arranged matters that about the most dangerous thing for themselves that Charters and his gang could do would be to put me out of the way.

Should I disappear, there were, as they knew only too well, at least three people whose immediate business in life would be to find out what had become of me.

(Copyright, 1930, by Frederick A. Stokes Co.)

Out the window! So tomorrow do the mysterious night prowlers go—but not so Waye's hopes.

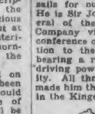
Listening Post

ANOTHER of the well known 13 months gets under way today with important developments on the radio calendar.

PERHAPS the most noteworthy of these is the coming of England's foremost radio personality, who sails for our shores on the 15th. He is Sir John Reith, director-general of the British Broadcasting Company visiting America for a conference on education in it's relation to the industry. He comes bearing a reputation for idealism, driving power and organizing ability. All three characteristics have made him the moving spirit of radio in the Kingdom.



SOMEWHAT OF a radio dictator in Great Britain, Sir John Reith sees to it that Johnny Bull hears only that which he approves. Thus he is a big man, standing six feet six inches tall in the bargain.

IT IS REVEALED that much wrangling goes on in the big studios when preference is shown dramatic and musical talent offered by the artists bureaus maintained by the broadcasters. Outside performers desiring to be booked on programs do the squawking.

WALTER DAMROSCH plans to leave the air in June, to complete a personal appearance tour. Negotiations are under way for Ernö Rapee to conduct the Damrosch Saturday night period.

NAMES IS NAMES: Tris (not too loud) Speaker is now an employe of N. B. C. at Chicago.

RUMOR is again rife regarding Henry Burbig, Hebrew dialect comedian. If what we hear is true, he will soon be heard in a new series of humorous bits.

Earn 7% on your money

An increase of 40% over an income of 5%; and an increase of 162⅓% over an income of 6%

Funds invested at 7%, and the income re-invested quarterly at the same rate, will double in ten years—an important fact to those who are building a future competence through investment, and who seek to eliminate the speculative hazard.

offers a return of 7%, plus the valuable right to participate in additional dividends, as declared, up to an extra 3%.

Assurance of future income may be had from past earnings records — for the five years, 1926 to 1930, inclusive, earnings of constituent companies, after all charges, have averaged enough each year to cover a dividend nearly three times as great as the regular preferred dividend of 7%. Truly a remarkable showing!

COMMUNISM VS. FREEDOM, AMERICAN IDEALS

Two Groups Celebrate May Day Today on Boston's Historic Common

One, the Capitol at Washington.

Happy, healthy children assembled there to pledge allegiance to Old Glory, flag of the country which has enabled them to be reared, educated and developed for the stern contest of life under the finest and most beneficent conditions that the history of the world has known.

A pledge for the day:

"May they grow to manhood loving their country, eager to defend it, willing to right the wrongs which may arise from time to time but never to entrust its independence to the allurements of any foreign alliance, be it the Communist party headquartered at Moscow or the League of Nations, headquartered at Geneva."

The other, a typical Communist May Day observance at the Parkman Bandstand, Boston Common.

This is where things are to be torn down. Down with capitalism. Down with government. If anything is to be elevated, it is the Soviet Union, not the American democracy.

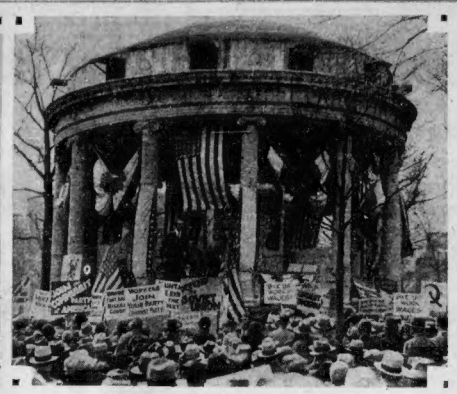
The worker's name is dragged into this May Day celebration without his knowledge or consent. He really wants work and wages, in free America. Oratory and misguided philosophy will not fill his dinner-pail. He may have his own ideas about Russia. But he is interested in America first.

Two groups of fellow residents of Massachusetts whose methods, if not their aims, are in striking contrast with each other assemble on historic Boston Common today.

THEY WOULD BUILD UP



THEY WOULD TEAR DOWN

The ladies' auxiliary of the Veterans of Foreign War, with a membership of 28,000 in this commonwealth, observe May Day by appealing to the patriotic impulses of the people, by stimulating confidence in the history, traditions and the future of the American Republic.

For four hours, with song, pageant, festival and oratory by distinguished public officials, they dedicate themselves with renewed faith to the country for whose honor and preservation and liberty their fathers, sons and brothers have offered their lives and suffered the tortures and privations of actual war.

Another group, who pride themselves as being members of the Communist Party, whose headquarters and chief officers are located in a foreign country, observe May Day by their customary denunciation of capitalism, by proclaiming the principles of social and civil revolution and by proposing to array the "workers" against the other groups of our social life.

Liberty means everything.

Being an independent American citizen has meant for generations the opportunity to find employment, education, material comfort and political independence under the amplest conditions ever established by any country in the history of this world.

To this condition of liberty, which has meant the opportunity for individual advancement nowhere excelled, the war veterans and their mothers, wives, sisters and daughters have rendered a definite, patriotic, substantial service.

The other group are precocious in their political preachments. They are usually young in years, unripe in experience and very frequently without any history or record of service to the country and to society as a whole.

They should be left to their own diversion and exposition of social principles for the day.

They may become wiser as they become older.

They will learn that confidence and faith in our common democracy are its strongest assets.

They will learn that co-operation, rather than divisions among our people, is necessary to overcome the distressed economic conditions from which we must emerge together.

They will learn that the adult American people have the right and influence to adjust their political problems at the ballot box.

They will learn that it is a thousand times more profitable in every respect to be a citizen of America than to be a puppet of some international political contraption such as the Internationalist Communist Party or the League of Nations.

Judge John J. Burns

His Appointment an Inspiration

John J. Burns and Joseph B. Ely have together contributed an inspirational chapter to the history of Massachusetts.

Burns is the son of an Irish immigrant. He worked his way through college. He contributed to the support of the family of eight children of which he was a member. He graduated with high honors from Boston College and Georgetown Law School. He won from Harvard her highest degrees in law.

Harvard recognized his talent and this university, established by the Puritan, appointed this son of an Irish immigrant a full-fledged professor of the Law School in which he had achieved distinction as a scholar.

Governor Ely recognized his talent and mental rectitude and has now nominated him to be a judge of the Massachusetts Superior Court, at the age of thirty, the youngest man in all the history of Massachusetts to attain that honor.

John Burns has lived a man's life.

In the study of law he has secured fame, in the practice of it he has earned rich experience in some of the most celebrated cases of recent local history.

In the grim struggle of his boyhood and youth he must have become rich in the experience against practical adversities which will enable him to be a humane judge, tempering with mercy the judgments which he will utter to his fellowman.

His nomination should inspire the youth of this Commonwealth. It is a practical answer to the lazy pessimist who complains that wealth, environment and social prestige are the sole essentials to civic success.

Listen, World! :: Love

By ELSIE ROBINSON

It Makes Us All of a Piece

FOR TWENTY-SEVEN years Benjamin De Casseres has loved that dark, beautiful woman called Bio. For sixteen of those years, she was the wife of a man now dead, and she and De Casseres were separated by three thousand miles and a marriage vow. Yet, during those years, their spirits found each others through letters more intimate than the touch of flesh.

Elsie Robinson

Their story I told in the April issue of the Cosmopolitan magazine. Reading, you will find a moving, lovely romance. But you will also find something which will surprise and excite you more than the love story of Benjamin and Bio . . . in their hunger and search you will find, revealed, the picture of that hunger and search which you had thought were the secret of your own heart.

Those two did not just want each other. They wanted understanding . . . understanding of themselves, each other, of life. They did not merely bare their love to each other.

They bared their loneliness and doubt and bewilderment, their need of some answer to the riddle of life. Listen—

"What is that central portion of us that never finds utterance; which steals into the eyes of lovers as endless yearning; which is mirrored in the eyes of the child as endless wonder; that darts from the eye of the dying man in a pathetic appeal to the one who holds his hands? . . . I feel this mystery of the Unuttered Word in starshine, moongleam, sunmist, babies' faces, in trains, cafes, in lonely woods—and in your letters."

So this man wrote to the woman he loved. And you'll cry, amazed —"But I didn't know anyone else felt like that?"

No matter who you are, no matter what your race or creed or color or lot in life may be, you'll cry— "I didn't know that anyone else felt like that! I didn't know that anyone else felt—all the time—this secret wonder and loneliness."

Reading the love letters of Benjamin and Bio you'll say that with amazement and relief. You will not have found the answer to the riddle but relief will come, just the same. For you will have found something almost as good as an answer—YOU WILL HAVE FOUND THAT LOVE MAKES US ALL OF A PIECE.

We may be very far apart in every other way. Some of us may be rich, some poor . . . some of us may be wise and famous and powerful, some foolish and weak and obscure . . . but in each of us the same hunger gnaws, the same question cries out for an answer.

"Who am I?" we all cry. "Why am I here? What is this difficult life? What is the meaning of love? Why can't love help me bear its mystery and loneliness?"

That is what we all cry and, sooner or later, we think we have found our answer in some Other One's eyes. You will discover that when you read those love letters. And you will never again feel quite so lonely, after you have discovered this . . . nor will other people seem so common and dull.

And as for love, you will realize its beauty more than ever before. For though love cannot solve the riddle of life, it is the only thing that can help us bear it. It is the one great comfort which we all may share . . . the one miracle that has the power to make any life lovely.

The Marry-Go-Round—We Moderns Are Quaint

By HELEN ROWLAND

WE MODERNS have such quaint ways of expressing our love, these days!

* * *

When a fond wife, recently, painted black stripes around the legs of her husband's dove-colored Easter trousers, he sued for divorce on the grounds of "cruelty." Yet, it may have been nothing but excessive love which inspired the Little Woman to decorate her spouse for the holiday. Love of art—or love of husband. You never can tell!

* * *

Most of the amorous poems you'll find in the current press are of the "I - love - you - so-I'd-like-to-black-your-eye" variety. Or of the "You-may - be-Prince-Charming-to-someone - but-you're-only-a-headache-to-me" school.

* * *

Long ago, Tom Moore expressed it all far more gracefully, when he wrote:

"When I loved you, I can but allow
I had many an exquisite minute;
But the scorn that I feel for you now
Hath even more luxury in it!"

Two or three loving couples, according to news reports, have recently expressed their passionate regard for each other by flinging cloisonne vases and bridge lamps at each other's heads across the bridge table. The Xantippe gesture—with modernistic improvements!

Most of us would prefer a milder love—a love that is less hectic and violent. The kind of husbandly love that expresses itself in hanging the portieres, paying the charge account cheerfully, and occasionally wiping the dishes would satisfy the heart of almost any woman.

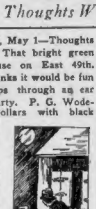
New York Day by Day

By O. O. McINTYRE

Thoughts While Strolling

NEW YORK, May 1—Thoughts while strolling: That bright green modernistic house on East 49th. Noel Coward thinks it would be fun to blow shrimps through an ear trumpet at a party. P. G. Wodehouse wears collars with black stripes. Wonder if Al Capone ever has insomnia.



William Collier certainly left Broadway flat. Scarcely ever see a red-headed chorus man. What's the E. for in E. Ray Goetz? Bleak, iron - shuttered warehouses. I'd hate to prowl through them alone at night. Boo! Duke Herrick, the park commissioner. And a shark with the tennis racket.

Hamish McLaurin, a Denver, Col., boy, who made good in the city. The old homes with Venetian blinds on Murray Hill. People used to "sneak" into Child's. Now they drive up in limousines. Often in dinner clothes. The Flatiron building—controlled by a Mr. Rosenbaum in Seattle. I get Walter O'Keefe and Willard Keefe mixed.

Fantastic skyscrapers that dizzy one like gazing at herringbone. The Madison Tower stretching skyward in slender supplication. The old Fourteenth street Rialto now a harsh jungle. One thinks of house diagrams on view at the box office. And critics such as James Huneker, Acton Davies and Alan Dale.

A dingy cuspidor shop still carries on in West 11th street. The old curiosity shops on Lexington avenue with windows crammed with flotsam of a vanquished happiness. Somehow touching to see a comfortable old arm chair for sale. Where did I get this way? Fretting about arm chairs?

Clifton Webb looks as though he couldn't make up his mind to laugh or cry. Overheard: "He was 18 years old and never heard of a curry-comb." New York! Still I was 35 before I knew a serviette was a napkin. And how many customers were teethed on napkin rings?

As a matter of fact, I don't ever remember eating a sandwich. There is something suspicious about them, like chicken croquettes in chain restaurants. The first one I ever tried to tackle was at a depot lunch stand in a West Virginia town. I just started to bite into it when for some reason I peeked under the lid. It was swarming with red ants.

* * *

Dr. Hugo Reisenfeld gave Boris Minnevitch the idea of organizing a harmonica orchestra. Minnevitch recruited mouth organists from all parts of the town, his aggregation including a dwarf and a colored boy from Harlem. It is all done in comic relief, yet they do not hesitate to render a Beethoven symphony and with remarkable feeling. It is an offering that strikes me as very low comedy at its very highest.

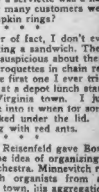
Ring Lardner, in his hilarious introduction to H. T. Webster's cartoon canto, "The Timid Soul," says: "I married an Indiana girl and I don't know where Webbie's wife came from, but I bet she wishes she was back there. It would be a coincidence if she came from Indiana, too. Still my wife's first name is Ellis and Webbie's wife's name is Ethel. I forget her maiden name before she was married but I may think of it some time."



I journeyed to Long Beach last evening for the first seasonal dip in the surf. I was not only smacked flat three times by breakers, swallowed two scoops of salt water, but was yanked out of a swift undertow by a life guard. I never knew the ocean to act so silly.
